HESSE ORDERS DRASTIC DRIVE FOR PADLOCKS

Calls on Commanders of All Precincts to List Dry Law Violators.

SEARCH OF RECORDS OF ARRESTS DIRECTED

Detailed Data on Liquor Cases Will Be Sent to Prosecutor.

VIGOR MARKS ACTION OF RETIRING MAJOR

All Buildings Where Whisky Is Sold or Stored to Face Injunction Actions.

The most drastic order in the history of the Police Department was issued yesterday by Maj. Edwin B. Hesse, retiring Superintendent of Police, to dry up the National Capital.

Hesse ordered the commanders of every precinct and bureau to report in detail on every place in their territories where liquor was sold or stored so that padlock injunctions could be gotten by the United States district attorney.

The commanders were not given any opportunity to evade responsibility in the matter nor to close their eyes to what might be shown by the precinct and bureau records.

"You personally" was the language Hesse used in ordering his officers to make a careful search of their precinct and bureau records to find just what places should be padlocked.

Post Record to Be Searched.

The order does not apply from this date forward, but applies as well to the past. Hesse directing that precinct records be searched to discover records of speak-easies and bootlegging places and liquor storehouses.

Each commander was ordered to submit a report in detail on his territory and was authorized to assign temporarily a member of his force to the preparation of that report so that there would be no excuse for delay in making reports.

It was the most drastic order issued by Hesse and was the answeer of the retiring police chief to criticism on the one hand, of members of Congress and professional reformers for being too lenient with violators of the liquor laws, and, on the other, by opponents of the liquor laws as a police chief who has tolerated frequent and flagrant violations of constitutional rights in the enforcement of those laws.

Forecasts Ruthless Drive.

While neither Hesse nor Inspector William S. Shelby, assistant superintendent of police and the friend and adviser of Hesse, would comment on the order, beyond saying that it meant just what it said and had nothing to do with the Jones law, the order was seen as the forerunner of a ruthless program by the police, weary from what they believe to be unjust criticism from fanatical drys, to make the people of the District feel the full burden of the law at every turn.

"We had nothing to do with making the law. Our job is to enforce it. We enforce laws, as best we can against murder, arson and robbery and the liquor law is just another job, in so far as it falls within out province. Those who don't like the law have redress and can, perhaps, have it changed."

That was the way one police official summed up the situation. Privately it

FAILS ON FLIGHT

EAKER AT TAMPICO; FAILS BY 200 MILES

Dawn-to-Dusk Attempt to Link Canal Zone and U. S. Again Proves Too Much.

TO RESUME TRIP TODAY

Brownsville, Tex., March 18 (A.P.).—Capt. Ira C. Eaker abandoned his attempted dawn-to-dusk flight from Panama to Brownsville at Tampico, at 6:30 p. m. No reason was given.

Eaker is in good condition and will resume his flight probably tomorrow, it was added.

Eaker brought his little Boeing plane safely to rest on the Huasteca Oil Co. field at Tampico and will remain there tonight. He is expected to make the 200-mile hop to Brownsville early in the morning.

Two thousand persons who had gathered to welcome the intrepid flier here, slowly deserted the field when announcement of his landing was made. Elaborate plans for a celebration to honor Eaker had been made.

This makes the second failure by Capt. Eaker within a few days to span the distance between Brownsville and the canal in a dawn-to-dusk flight.

The success of Capt. Eaker on the early stages of his dawn-to-dusk flight, which started at France Field, Colon, at 4 a. m. (3 a. m. central standard time), had aroused confidence at the airport here that he would be able to complete the 1,950-mile journey before dark.

Weather conditions were reported good along the route.

On his attempted dawn-to-dusk flight southward Saturday, Capt. Eaker ran into cloud formations which forced him to descend for the night at Guatemala City. He continued on to the Canal Zone yesterday and started back this morning undismayed by his initial failure.

More than half of the long grind was completed when Capt. Eaker made his third fueling stop of the day at Guatemala City at 10:15 a. m. (central time) and hopped off 15 minutes later for Minatitlan, Mexico. After Minatitlan he had only one more scheduled stop—Tampico, Mexico.

As chief pilot on the 150-hour endurance flight of the Army monoplane Question Mark, Capt. Eaker won his reputation as an "iron man" and demonstrated his ability to stand up under the strain of long duty in the air.

TORREON LOST, REBELS MAKING DESERT STAND

Their Retreat Described as Rout by Mexico City Bulletins.

ALMOST ALL DURANGO IN LOYALISTS' HANDS

Revolt Leaders Declare Escobar Drawing Foe Far From Base.

INSURGENTS PREPARE FOR MAZATLAN DRIVE

Two Revolutionary Leaders En Route to United States to See Hoover.

(Associated Press.)

The main army of the Mexican revolutionists was in retreat last night 100 miles north of the principal rebel stronghold at Torreon and the federal cavalry advance guard was investing the city. Gen. Escobar, rebel commander in chief, was at Escalon, in the State of Chihuahua, at the head of his command.

A government bulletin from Mexico City described the rebel retreat as panic-stricken.

Evacuation of this great natural fortress and railroad junction, where the rebels have been strongly entrenched and concentrating their troops for ten days, is the first decisive turn in the campaign since suppression of revolt in Vera Cruz.

The federals now are in possession of nearly all the State of Durango. Gen. Calles himself was moving his headquarters close to Torreon from Durango City, which an Associated Press correspondent reported already resuming its normal aspect.

First news of the rebel evacuation of Torreon came from federal Gen. Almazan, commanding the forces which had recaptured Monterey week before last. A scouting aviator from his army reported that the rebels were abandoning Torreon, apparently panic-stricken.

Planes Play Big Part.

Airplanes have played a big part in the campaign. Torreon was repeatedly bombarded Saturday by federal planes and the first air combat in the history of Mexican revolutions took place when a lone rebel aviator went out to attack the larger federal planes. He was beaten off and the federals caused a panic in Torreon as they dropped their bombs on the city. One federal aviator was reported to have been brought down.

Rebel headquarters at Juarez, in northern Chihuahua, admitted that federal raiders had torn up tracks and burned bridges on the railway line to Torreon. The line was cut at Bermejillo, a few miles north of Torreon.

Two agents of the revolution are on their way to confer with President Hoover. Francisco Sabia Maria, lawyer, and Serzain Ugarte, former secretary to President Carranza, were expected in Juarez from Torreon by train and then to fly to Washington from Juarez.

Brig. Gen. Moseley and a platoon of United States Infantry were ordered to Columbus, N. Mex., to investigate conditions there as a precautionary measure.

Rebels Prepare for Attack.

Mazatlan, Sinaloa, Mexico, March 18 (U.P.).—The rebel attack on Mazatlan is expected to start within the next 24 hours.

Reports reaching this city today said that insurgent soldiers had been sighted in the vicinity.

It has been reported here for several days that a strong rebel force under Commander Plans to Fly in Search of Gould, Balchen and June.

New York, March 18 (A.P.).—No word has been received for three days from Larry Gould, geologist, and his two companions, Bernt Balchen and Harold June, aviation pilots and members of the Byrd Antarctic expedition, who have been engaged in an aerial geological trip to the Rockefeller Mountains, according to a radio message from the South Pole expedition copyrighted by the New York Times and St Louis Post-Dispatch.

Commander Richard E. Byrd is preparing to fly in search of his comrades as soon as favorable weather obtains, the message stated.

L. M. Gould, one of the three members of Byrd's party lost in the Antarctic wastes, is a widely known geologist and geographer. He was professor of geology at the University of Michigan when the commander selected him to accompany the expedition.

Harold I. June, who is widely known in Washington, was selected to take the place of Floyd Bennett, Byrd's crack pilot, who died of pneumonia in an attempt to rescue the Bremen fliers from Greenly Island. June, a chief petty officer and aviation pilot of the Navy, was loaned by the Navy Department to the expedition after a personal appeal by Commander Byrd. June is 33 years old, married and has one child. He has been in the Navy since the World War and is credited with 1,500 hours in the air. His home is at Stamford, Conn. At the time of his selection he was stationed at the Naval Air Base at Hampton Roads, Va.

Bernt Balchen is the chief pilot of the Byrd air fleet. Balchen was one of the crew which accompanied Byrd on the flight from New York to Paris which ended in the water on the coast of France.

KELLOGG ASKS DATA ON SIAMESE LIQUOR

Launches Inquiry on His Own Initiative in Seizure of Legation Beverage.

APOLOGY SEEN AS LIKELY

By ALBERT W. FOX.

Without waiting for formal protest from diplomatic quarters, Secretary of State Kellogg yesterday began an investigation of the half-serious, half-comical, but most perplexing, international tangle created by the action of a Washington policeman on Friday in seizing a privately owned truck containing choice liquor consigned to the Siamese Legation here. It looks as if the complications over the incident may be just beginning and indicated developments may be summarized as follows:

First—The United States Government recognizes that it must express regret privately or apologize publicly if such action is called for, there being no semblance of a defense under international law or under American statutes for arbitrary interference with recognized diplomatic immunities.

Second—The foreign diplomats, under the leadership of Sir Esme Howard, the British Ambassador and dean of the corps, will act in unison, either after a meeting or a series of consultations, and then take the matter up with the Government of the United States in order that there may be some guarantee against repetitions of the incident which involved the Legation of Siam.

Third—The Siamese Legation is anxious to avoid embarrassing the State Department, but many of the diplomats believe that a genuine service to the representatives of all foreign governments and to the State Department as well will be rendered by the Siamese if they press the present case to an issue and thereby clear the atmosphere of uncertainty.

Usually, the State Department endeavors to smooth over international incidents as quietly and expeditiously as possible for the reason that public discussion is always likely to arouse public opinion in foreign countries and make bad matters worse. But in the present instance, it is suggested that there would be compensating advantages for a policy of settling the issue raised in a direct and unmistakable manner. Fortunately, the Siamese case is not as serious as it might have been.

Seizure of liquor belonging to the British Embassy, for example, or to the embassy of France or Germany, or some other leading power, might admittedly have far-reaching reverberations abroad and the circumstances might be such that the United States would feel compelled to insist upon the rigors of the punishments provided

St. Elizabeths Inmate Victim of Pistol Shot

Capt. Simon Postiak, U. S. A., retired, 40 years old, of San Francisco, Calif., last night was found dead by an attendant in his room in Maple Ward, St. Elizabeths Hospital, with a bullet through his right temple and a 25caliber automatic revolver clutched in his hand. He was pronounced dead by Dr. William M. Kenna.

Capt. Postiak, who has been an inmate of the institution since 1923, was on city parole and was free to leave the grounds of the hospital without guard. He is survived by a wife and son in San Francisco. Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt will view the body this morning.

Five Nicaraguan Bandits Killed by U. S. Marines

Managua, Nicaragua, March 18 (A.P.). United States Marines have come off victorious in two more contacts with bandits in the northern area, according to information received today by Brig. Gen. Logan Feland, commanding the Marine Corps here. A patrol of marines engaged a minor group of outlaws on March 14, about 20 miles northwest of Limay, killing one bandit.

The following day in the same vicinity a combined patrol of marines and nicaraguan volunteers killed four outlaws and captured three. Arms and ammunition were seized in both instances. There were no marine casualties.

HOOVER ELIMINATES 2 CUSTOMARY TALKS

Has Too Much Work for Red Cross and D. A. R. Addresses.

THREE YEARLY FORECAST

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

President Hoover has broken from the ranks of his predecessors and declined invitations to address either the annual meeting of the Daughters of the American Revolution or that of the American Red Cross.

He has agreed to deliver a Memorial Day address at Arlington.

It has been traditional for the President to make addresses on all three of these occasions, but in so far as this year is concerned, at least, Mr. Hoover has concluded that he will not have the time. It is the beginning of his administration. For one thing he has an extra session of Congress on his hands and will have it on his hands throughout the summer.

There is much other work to be done, the putting into effect of his policies which were conceived and formulated, many of them, while he was Secretary of Commerce.

But there is even a question as to whether he will return to the traditional speeches after this year. It is

RED CROSS AID RIDES TO WARN THOUSANDS

Death Toll Is Estimated at More Than 100; Typhoid Feared.

FOUR COMMUNITIES UNDER MARTIAL LAW

Antitoxin Rushed Into Area; Airplanes Drop Food to Many Marooned.

Jacksonville, Fla., March 18 (A.P.).—With rescue work completed and the task of caring for approximately 3,000 refugees confronting the area of northwest Florida from Caryville to Milton, near Pensacola, fresh alarm was sounded tonight in the rapidly flooding basin of the Apalachicola River. Half of the 800 residents of River Junction, where the Chattahoochee and Flint Rivers form the Apalachicola, have deserted their homes, which were flooded by a 33-foot stage in the river. Anxiety was expressed, however, for many small communities along the Apalachicola, from River Junction to its mouth.

Edward H. Cavin, a Red Cross worker at Bainbridge, Ga., about 40 miles north of River Junction, gained permission from the national Red Cross headquarters in Washington to ride down the river and warn riverside inhabitants to seek higher ground. The crest of the swollen currents of the Chattahoochee and Flint Rivers still was moving from the north and was not expected to reach River Junction before tomorrow.

Caryville, of 1,200 population, and Milligan, of 600, were wrecked towns, their inhabitants evacuated to higher ground and buildings left to the mercy of the floods. Many houses were reported washed away at Caryville, where the Choctawhatchee River reached 38 feet and a report to the governor's office in Tallahassee said only four houses were left standing in Milligan.

100 Dead; Disease Spreads.

Montgomery, Ala., March 18 (United Press).—With an official estimate of 100 dead and 17 known to have lost their lives in Alabama alone as the result of floods which covered a large portion of the southern section of that State during the past five days, National Guard troops and Public Health Service officials battled today to check the menace of disease.

Martial law still was in effect at Elba, Geneva, Brewton and Flomaton, but refugees were expected to be permitted to return to their wrecked homes at Elba and Geneva tomorrow.

Alabama health officials announced today that 3,000 units of antitoxin had been sent into the flood area to fight the spread of disease. Added to the fear of typhoid as a possible result of polluted water, sixteen cases of pneumonia and a growing number of cases of measles were reported as a result of prolonged exposure suffered by many of the 15,000 homeless.

Thousands of refugees still were marooned in inundated districts today and were fed by airplane, bread, canned meats and milk being dropped by the ton. Clothing and blankets were distributed in a like manner.

Alabama Has New Flood.

Montgomery, Ala., March 18 (A.P.).—The Alabama River, rising and spreading out until it is 10 miles wide in places has inundated an area estimated to be several times as large as that flooded last week by the Pea River and its tributaries.

First news of the new dangerous situation in four Alabama counties was brought here today by aviators, while plans for rehabilitation of the flood-stricken towns and communities in the Pea River section were being put into execution.

Hohenzollern Scion Likely To Pay Visit to Washington

"Prince of Prussia" May Be Guest of Mrs. John Bigelow.

Louis Ferdinand Hohenzollern, wise-cracking "Prince of Prussia," who landed in New York three days ago, may come to Washington, it was learned last night.

Mrs. John Bigelow, wife of Col. John Bigelow, U. S. A., retired, of 1836 Jefferson place northwest, said that she "understood" that the young nobleman planned to pay a visit here, but she did not know when. He is now the guest of her brother-in-law, Poultney C. Bigelow, at Malden-on-Hudson.

Mr. Bigelow, as a child visiting Germany, played with the visiting Hohenzollern's grandfather, former Kaiser Wilhelm II. Later he was American Ambassador to Germany.

Louis Ferdinand is the second son of the former Crown Prince of Germany, and is the first member of his immediate family to visit the United States since the World War. He recently was graduated from the University of Berlin with the degree of doctor of philosophy.

Ship news reporters, who greeted the visitor when he arrived on the steamship Berlin, found to their delight that he was as quick at repartee as their own Mayor Walker. In the first place he discouraged the use of his title, "Prince of Prussia," saying it was "only a name."

"Why are you traveling?" he was asked. "Do you plan to become a diplomat?"

"Me? A diplomat?" he laughed. "I couldn't be a diplomat. I always tell the truth."

"Rookie" Plane Sets New Flight Record

Lieut. J. T. Shumate Remains Aloft Eleven Hours and Four Minutes.

Little Rock, Ark., March 18 (A.P.).—A new world's endurance record for primary training Government planes was made today by Lieut. Joe T. Shumate, of the Arkansas National Guard, who remained aloft eleven hours and four minutes. He took off at 5:45 a. m. and landed at 4:49 p. m. His 130-gallon gas supply was exhausted.

Lieut. Shumate kept his plane within sight of the local airport as a precaution against a forced landing. The ship, which is used to train "rookie" Army pilots, is not designed for long cross-country flying. It has a normal gasoline capacity of 40 gallons, but this was increased to 130 gallons by installing several additional tanks in the fuselage. A gallon of gasoline was consumed approximately every nine miles.

A silver cup recently was offered by Lieut. Stafford L. Lambert, of St. Louis, secretary of the National Guard Air Association, to the flier keeping a plane of this type in the air longest without refueling.

Blanton and Gibson Scored At Love Feast for Hesse

"Halo Grabbers, Character Assasisns and Traducers" Denounced at Banquet Given by Board of Trade to Honor Retiring Police Superintendent.

What was designed to be a forum of praise for Maj. Edwin B. Hesse, retiring superintendent of police, ended last night with the principal speakers heaping denunciation on former Representative Blanton, of Texas; Representative Gibson, of Vermont, and those described only as "halo grabbers," small town men, character assassins and traducers of a good name, who unleash cowardly attacks behind the protective veil of their immunity."

Several of the speakers so far forgot to confine their remarks to words of praise for Maj. Hesse that Odell S. Smith, toastmaster at the banquet given in the Raleigh Hotel by the public order committee of the Board of Trade, found it necessary to remind those present that the dinner was not given for the purpose of "slinging mud at members of Congress."

Joseph Burkart, vice president of the committee and former president of the local Bar Association, characterized Hesse as a "martyr," and one whom certain unnamed members of Congress sought to rob of the glories of 36 years of loyal service to the people of the District of Columbia by using the tics of "character assassins" while hiding behind their congressional immunity from being held responsible for their actions.

W. W. Everett, president of the Board of Trade, also scored those who, he said, unfairly and unjustly attacked Maj. Hesse without giving him an opportunity to answer their charges on the same basis that they were made—and, incidentally—never proven.

Matthew O'Brien, member of the public order committee, in referring to those members of Congress who indulged in "character assassination and muckraking," in "slandering" members of the Police Department, said they were content to accept anything as evidence. O'Brien referred to Blanton and Gibson as "halo grabbers."

O'Brien said the people of the District of Columbia were tired of seeing "small town men" placed on the District committees in Congress and urged members of the Board of Trade to see to it that the leaders in Congress assign only such members to the District committees who come from cities the size of Washington and who are qualified to Base, reported to Gov. Bibb Graves that people were clinging to trees" in the newly flooded area, and the governor himself flew over the section, remaining in the air for three hours. Besides the plane in which the governor, Maj Weaver and two other officials rode, several scout planes were sent out. Lieut. John F. Gill, pilot of one of them, estimated the flooded area to be ten times that of the Geneva-Elba district.

River Is 10 Miles Wide.

Lieut. Gill said the river is 10 miles wide at Primrose, Wilcox County. Primrose is about 40 miles southwest of Selma. It is in a horseshoe formed by the river. No report has been received from Miller's Ferry, 5 miles west of Primrose, which is also on a horseshoe. Chilatchee and Pine Barren Creeks empty into the Alabama a short distance upstream from Primrose.

Wilcox County is in the heart of the famed black belt section. It is a flat country with cotton the principal agricultural product. The lowland sections which will receive the brunt of the flood water is inhabited principally by negro farm tenants.

The governor's decision to make a flight himself came after Maxwell Field Army fliers had reported that the Alabama had forced Lowndes County residents to the tree tops in a new flood sector adjacent to Montgomery County.

Governor Served Overseas.

The governor, a veteran military executive, with eighteen months' overseas service, earlier issued an order that would permit inoculated property owners and housewives to return to devastated Elba in the southeastern corner of the State.

Maj. Weaver piloted the sedan plane loaned for the flight. Passengers included Charles Moffett, president of the state board of administration.

Meanwhile Adjt. Gen. F. E. Butler, director of relief work at headquarters here said the situation at Brewton, Flomaton, Garland, Keego, Pollard and nearby communities in the Alabama-Tombigbee Basin was well in hand. Army fliers dropped a 24-hours' food supply to Brewton and nearby towns today, but reported that much of the town was still under water.

Residents Soon to Return.

At Enterprise and Troy, the adjutant general said, conditions were so improved that about 1,000 Elba residents will be permitted to return. All children under 16 will be detained at refugee camps, however. The Elba water supply has been chlorinated and National Guardsmen were today removing carcasess and debris from the streets. Geneva residents probably will be permitted to return gradually beginning tomorrow, the adjutant general said, provided sanitary conditions permit.

The Alabama death list stood at sixteen today, with indications still apparent to authorities that the death toll would mount higher when a check of outlying districts and isolated communities has been completed.

The Red Cross today ordered disaster relief workers to Troy in the Elba area, Geneva and Brewton and others were en route for service at River Falls and other towns. The Red Cross also learned that Phenix City, Ala., on the Georgia-Alabama line, was in need of help, with 300 families homeless.

(Associated Press.)

A new Red Cross relief code distributed to local chapters just eighteen days ago has been tested in the Southern flood and found to be a useful factor in expediting aid to the thousands trapped by the flood waters.

The code was drafted by the Army Air Corps for communication between stranded refugees and airplanes. The planes signal the ground by making short circles over the refugees and by short blasts from the exhaust, five short blasts, for instance, meaning "do you need anything?"

Those on the ground use strips of cloth 12 feet long and 2 feet wide forming letters and laid on the earth in the largest open space available. A complete set of signals using combinations of letters and Roman numbers are authorized for this use, and many of them have been utilized by the Southern flood sufferers. Among those reported to Red Cross headquarters here as having been used are "K," meaning killed; "O," persons homeless, preceded by the Roman number indicating the total, and "EA," salt.

5 Suspects in Slaying Held for Grand Jury

The five colored men arrested in connection with the fatal shooting March 12 of Clarence Harvey and Edward Smith, both colored, police informers, living at 224 V street northwest, were held yesterday for action of the grand jury by a coroner's jury.

Leon Thomas Brown, 19 years old, of 405 Forty-seventh street northeast; Lawrence Bias, 26 years old, Fairmont Heights, Md.; Theodore Smith, 24 years old, Annapolis, Md.; Cornelius Lewis Lyons, 32 years old, 6-A N street southwest, and William Bradley, 35 years old, 4408 Dix street northeast, are the men held. The informers were shot down in Broad Alley, near G street southwest.

U. S. AGENCIES JOIN IN MERCY MISSION

Army, Coast Guard and Public Health Services Aiding Red Cross Relief.

PLANES FURNISHING FOOD

(Associated Press.)

The Red Cross, joined yesterday by the Army, the Coast Guard and the Public Health Service, in the effort to prevent further loss of life and suffering in flood-stricken Southern areas, increased emergency relief forces and supplies centered at Montgomery, Ala., and moved to prevent disaster in Florida.

A Red Cross worker, Charles Smith, was ordered to travel by boat down the Chattahoochee River in Georgia, to see that local chapters and volunteer committees were fully supplied and ready to care for all emergency needs.

Ten Army airplanes, ordered to Montgomery for relief duty by the War Department, were expected to arrive last night. They left Langley Field, Va., Sunday, in command of Lieut James W. Hammond.

The Coast Guard yesterday ordered all vessels in the vicinity of the stricken districts to remain at the call of Red Cross workers.

Red Cross officials were in almost constant communication by telephone and telegraph with relief workers in and around Montgomery, it was said, following a report by telephone by H. B. Williamson, who is in charge of nineteen workers in the section, that the health situation was not grave at present.

The most serious condition in Alabama, it was reported, is at Geneva, where, it was said, airplanes continued to drop food, clothes and medical supplies in response to urgent signals from stranded refugees. A message from Phoenix City, Ala., requested assistance for the former occupants of 200 flooded homes.

Rescue Ships Seek Schooners in Peril

Coast Guard Patrol Boats Scour Chesapeake Bay for Helpless Craft.

Norfolk, Va., March 18 (A.P.).—Two unidentified schooners in distress in the Chesapeake Bay and calling for help yesterday were still the objects of search today by Coast Guard patrol boats dispatched from section base 8 at Norfolk. Both schooners, the one with her sails carried away and the other dismasted, were in need of immediate help, messages received at Coast Guard headquarters stated.

Call for help for a small schooner off York Spit with her sails gone was relayed to the Coast Guard yesterday afternoon at 4:50 o'clock and patrol boats in the vicinity were instructed by radio immediately to proceed to the position given. Arriving there but a short while later no trace of the schooner was found. Coast Guard officials believed that the schooner, which was near shore, had possibly been picked up by small boats from the York River.

The second schooner was reported by a Japanese steamer dismasted off Cove Point, Md., later in the afternoon. A patrol boat dispatched to search for her radioed from Baltimore that no trace of the wrecked craft had been found. The second casualty was in the province of the Coast Guard cutter Apache at Baltimore and might possibly have been picked up by her.

Suspect in Millar Attack Held Here

Robert Freeman to Be Viewed by Takoma Park Woman, Assault Victim.

Robert Jefferson Freeman, colored, of Chevy Chase, Md., was held at the Thirteenth Precinct Stationhouse last night for investigation in connection with the assault last week on Mrs. Clara Millar, of Takoma Park, Md.

Freeman, whose description is said to tally with that of Mrs. Millar's assailant, will be taken before the woman today for possible identification. Freeman told police he was 15 years old, but police say he looks older.

Park Policeman J. F. Connelly, who arrested Freeman early last night, said he picked him up on Kalmia road.

Following the arrival of the colored youth at the Thirteenth Precinct Stationhouse, Sergt. J. H. Davis, of the precinct, went to Mrs. Miller's home and obtained from her a full description of her assailant. Her description fits Freeman, the policeman said.

NATIONAL GUARD CALLED TO FLOOD SCENE

Alabama National Guard units were aiding in rescue work in the vicinity of Elba, Ala. The little town, in the valley of the Pea River, was swept by flood waters which caused untold sufferings and property damage. GIRL'S $100,000 SUIT AGAINST THAW ENDS

Jury to Give Sealed Verdict This Morning; Plaintiff Tearful on Stand.

BEATEN AT PARTY, CLAIM

New York, March 18 (A.P.).—A supreme court jury tonight reported that it would file a sealed verdict in the $100,000 suit brought against Harry K. Thaw by Miss Marcia Estardus for an alleged attack upon her in his apartment the morning of January 3, 1927.

The decision of the jury, which received the case late this afternoon, will be read tomorrow morning.

Miss Estardus charged that Thaw enticed her to a room in his apartment while a New Year's party was being held in another part of the suite and that he knocked her down, attacked and bit her.

During the trial today, Edward Werner, of Charleston, W. Va., formerly a secretary for Thaw, testified that he saw Miss Estardus in Thaw's apartment shortly after the alleged attack and that he saw no cuts or bruises.

Thaw did not take the stand.

William B. Roulston, her attorney, in his opening address, said he would show that Miss Estardus was a woman of good character who supported her aged mother and her crippled father by giving ballroom parties.

Mrs. Mary O'Neill, the plaintiff's mother, testified that her daughter was formerly married to a naval officer and she obtained a divorce from him eight years ago.

Miss Estardus followed her mother on the stand and tearfully told of the alleged attack. She said that at a dinner she attended she met William Pendleton, Thaw's secretary, and later went to his apartment to join a party there, where she had two or three cocktails.

Miss Estardus said she met Thaw and several others at the apartment. They had breakfast there, she said, or fried eggs, coffee and champagne. Then Thaw asked her to go into another room "to see a picture," and in the hall she was struck on the back of the head.

When she regained consciousness, she testified, Thaw was standing over her with a hairbrush in his hand and when she attempted to rise he struck her again and kicked her.

S. H. Groves Arrested On Hit-Run Accusation

Salisbury, Md., March 18.—Shelton H. Groves, who said he was a representative of a Washington Bankers Association, an alleged "hit-and-run" posted collateral today for his appearance in court Thursday.

He is charged with having struck a car near Princess Anne last night and failing to stop and with recklessness and driving while under the influence of intoxicants. No one is known to have been hurt. He was arrested on a side road near here by State police.

Policeman Allen Asks Suspension

Tells Hesse Retention in View of Charges Is Incongruous.

Policeman R. J. Allen, of the Third Precinct, yesterday requested Maj. Edwin B. Hesse, superintendent of police, to suspend him pending the outcome of his trial on charges of using his pistol without just cause.

Allen is to be tried Thursday for shooting a colored youth in the leg when the latter, with two companions, failed to halt at Allen's command. Allen said he had heard gunshots and saw the men running out of an alley and believed a felony had been committed.

To keep him on duty in possession of his authority as an officer of the law and in possession of his weapons, Allen said, seemed "utterly incongruous" in view of the charges against him of improper use of his gun.

Six Held in Theft Of Lee Heirlooms

Men and Women Indicted in Fairfax; Valuables Still Missing.

Indictments charging grand larceny in connection with the theft of valuable heirlooms and antiques from Ravensworth, the ancestral home of the Lee family, were returned by a grand jury in Fairfax County Court yesterday against Mrs. Eva Garland, Mrs. Jessie Dersiers, Mrs. M. L. Minter, Douglas Dove, Linwood Newman and Andrew Nelson. Mrs. Garland and Mrs. Dersiers are residents of Washington, while the others are of Alexandria, except Nelson, who resides at Ravensworth.

The heirlooms and antiques, alleged to have been stolen by the group, are the property of Dr. George Bolling Lee, a grandson of the Confederate general, Robert E. Lee, who resides at Ravensworth and New York City.

Among the articles held removed from Ravensworth were a silver-mounted walnut pistol case, which belonged to Gen. Lee, and one of the famous Cincinnati plates, part of a set belonging to George Washington, which came to the Lee family through the Custis branch. The pistol case and a number of other articles have been recovered, but the plate and other valuable pieces have not been found.

Vanderbilt Kin to Wed Girl From Minnesota

New York, March 18 (A.P.).—Frederick Vanderbilt Field, great grandson of the late William H. Vanderbilt, today obtained a marriage license to wed Miss Elizabeth G. Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert W. Brown, of Duluth, Minn.

No date has been set for the wedding, Mr. Field said tonight. The bridegroom-to-be is 24 years old and is also a grandson of Mrs. Henry White, widow of a former Ambassador to London. He was graduated from Harvard in 1927.

IMPEACHMENT CASE OF HARDY IS OPENED

Los Angeles Jurist Charged With Accepting Check From Aimee.

WRONG MOTIVE IS DENIED

Sacramento, Calif., March 18 (A.P.). The impeachment trial of Superior Judge Carlos S. Hardy, charged before the State senate with misdemeanors in office in connection with the receipt of a "love offering" of $2,500 from Aimee Semple McPherson, the evangelist, got under way here today.

The five managers appointed to prosecute the jurist are assemblymen Walter J. Little, William Hornblower, Clare Woolwine, M. J. Cronin and H. F. Sewell. The prosecutors were on hand early. As soon as the case was called, Judge Hardy appeared with his lawyers. They are his son, Rex Hardy, Frank M. Carr and Ray E. Nimmo. The jurist formally announced "present."

After being in session but a short time, the senate recessed because of the absence of Senators W. H. Duval and George C. Cleveland. Both the prosecution and defense agreed that all the senators should be present when the taking of testimony commenced. Crowds of men and women filled the corridors outside the senate chambers long before the hearing began and many were unable to find seats in the gallery.

The principal charge against Judge Hardy is that he accepted a fee from Mrs. McPherson and was unduly active in her behalf at the time she was being investigated by a Los Angeles grand jury. The jury inquired into the mysterious disappearance of the evangelist and her subsequent return with a story of having been kidnaped. The inquisitorial body investigated a charge that Mrs. McPherson instead of having been abducted, in reality was on a romantic visit at Carmel, Calif., with Kenneth Ormiston, the radio operator of her Los Angeles temple.

A demurrer setting forth the contention that none of the acts "attributed to the defendant was one with corrupt, partial, malicious or other improper motives or with knowledge that they were wrong," was filed with the senate by Judge Hardy.

The demurrer further contends that of the charges set forth by five articles of impeachment none is sufficient and that none of the charges "constitutes a misdemeanor in office by a judge of the superior court."

Motorcycle Policeman Asks $75,000 in Suit

Policeman Marcel Caussin, of the Fourteenth Precinct, filed suit for $75,000 damages in District Supreme Court yesterday against the Black & White Taxi Co., alleging permanent injuries as a result of an accident Christmas morning, when he was knocked from his motorcycle by a taxicab, said to have been operated by the company.

In his petition, Caussin alleges that the taxicab driver failed to signal when driving from the curb on Connecticut avenue northwest and darted suddenly into the street, striking his motorcycle and hurling him to the pavement. He suffered a fractured skull and broken jaw and arm and claims a permanent nervous affliction and other injuries.

FOLEY DROPS OUT OF TAMMANY RACE

Deadlock Results as All Leaders Scramble for Olvany's Place as Chief.

HINT SMITH-WALKER ROW

New York, March 18 (United Press) James A. Foley, looked upon as the logical successor to George Olvany as leader of Tammany Hall, this afternoon told newspaper men he had decided to refuse the leadership. His announcement threw the negotiations for choosing a successor to Olvany, who resigned last week, into a temporary deadlock with almost every district leader in Manhattan as well as several outsiders either avowed or secret candidates.

Other developments of the day included:

Increased persistence of the stories of a break between Mayor James J. Walker, of New York and former Gov. Alfred E. Smith.

Word that the district leaders had agreed among themselves that the new leader must come from their number and also that they would not consider "outside dictation" in the selection. The "outside dictation" was taken to refer to any attempt of either former Gov Smith or Mayor Walker to force a choice upon Tammany.

A belief voiced by many politicians that no selection could be made when the executive committee meets Friday, and that eventually Foley, son-in-law of the late "Boss" Murphy who ruled Tammany until he died in 1924, will be forceed to accept the leadership in order to prevent an open breach which would jeopardize Tammany in the fall election.

Gov. Smith remained in Albany today but it was understood he would come to New York tomorrow. He made no public statements regarding Tammany affairs but John F. Gilchrist's name was placed among the possibilities and word went around that he was Smith's candidate. While the Gilchrist boom was getting started Mayor Walker was still trying to pursuade Foley to accept the leadership. Gilchrist and Walker are friendly, but the mayor showed no disposition to give his friend any support in this instance.

The district leaders of Tammany were said to resent any effort of either Smith or Walker to dictate to them and to have several other ideas on the selection of a leader. A number of them plainly were opposed to the "new Tammany" idea which was so prominent in the ast presidential campaign. The "new Tammany" left 'ta cowbells and whistles at home when it went to the Houston convention; it had no barrels of beer. There are plenty of Tammany men who still feel the "new Tammany" movement is making the tiger too much of a gentleman, if not actually replacing him with a lady tiger. Those who feel that way are looking for a rough and ready leader of the old school.

With Foley eliminating himself, and the opposition of district leaders to "outside dictation" decreasing Gilchrist's chances despite the favor of the former governor, John F. Curry, one of the first to indicate he migh be receptive, was believed sharing first place among the possibilities tonight with Martin McCue.

The selection of the new leader will be made by the executive committee of Tammany. It has 23 members and twelve votes are necessary for choice. The committee meets Friday afternoon.

Man Urging Brother's Arrest Given 30 Days

For attempting to have his brother arrested, William Mullen, 48 years old, was sentenced by Judge Given in Police Court to serve 30 days in the District Jail yesterday in default of a $25 fine.

Policeman L. G. Scripture, of the Fourth Precinct, testified that Mullen came to the station house on Sunday and asked the aid of police in arresting his brother, whom he said was drunk. The more the complainant talked, the policeman said, the more he was convinced that the complainant was drunk and arrested him on that charge.

Patronage Chiefs Guests of Hoover

New York Situation to Be Gone Into at White House Tonight.

The patronage situation in New York State will be threshed out this evening at the White House, it became known yesterday. The discussion will follow a dinner to which the triumvirate appointed by the President before his inauguration as an emergency measure and Representative Parker, chairman of the House interstate and foreign commerce committee, representing the up-State outsiders, have been invited.

H. Edmund Machold, State Republican chairman and spokesman for the patronage triumvirate; William H. Hill, head of the Hoover Curtis volunteer campaign committee last year, and Charles D. Hilles, national committeeman are the members of the trio.

The invitation to the triumvirate and Representative Parker is believed to indicate that the President will dire the New York patronage situation in person from the White House.

Heflin Uninjured As Bottle Misses

Police Officer Is Hurt by Hurled Missile; Catholics Assailed.

Brockton, Mass., March 18 (A.P.).—A bottle thrown at the automobile of United States Senator J. Thomas Heflin as he was leaving a hall here tonight struck and injured Police Sergt. Stephen J. Bryan.

Senator Heflin, speaking under the auspices of Mayflower Klan, No. 2, Realm of Massachusetts, Ku Klux Klan, was greeted with jeers, but there was no other disturbance.

The greeting given the senator was much calmer than that given him last night when a large crowd jeered him and boys threw fistfuls of pebbles at his automobile. After leaving the hall Senator Heflin went to his hotel, where he refused to be interviewed. In his speceh Senator Heflin charged that the Knights of Columbus had a slogan, "Make America Catholic," and reiterated his charge that the Catholic Church was attempting to have religion taught in all schools of the country. He advocated the stopping of immigration for five years "until we find out who's who in America."

Field-Oxford Party Finds Proof of 2 Biblical Floods

Expedition Working at Site of Ancient City of Kish Unearth Silt Layers Believed to Date Back to 3400 and 4000 B. C.

Chicago, March 18 (A.P.).—Discovery of evidence of two great floods, one of them described in the Bible in Genesis, was announced today by the Field Museum, which is sponsor with Oxford University, of an expedition working on the site of the ancient city of Kish.

The Babylonian and Hebrew accounts of the deluge are fully confirmed by the expedition's findings, Prof. Stephen Langdon cabled the museum.

Archeologists of the expedition estimate, from the depth of the layer of silt in the excavated site at which the evidence was found, from the traces of the damage done by water, and from inscribed tablets found there, that the flood recorded in the Bible occurred about 3400 B. C.

The earlier flood, of which the expedition has found traces, is estimated to have occurred about 4000 B. C.

Announcement that material evidence had been unearthed of the Biblical flood was made last week by the expedition sponsored by the University of Pennsylvania and the British Museum, which for seven years has been excavating the ruins of ancient Sumeria.

The Field Museum-Oxford University expedition found that the evidence of the floods is contained in two strata of the ruins about the Sumerian city of Kish, which now lie at levels about 45 and 55 feet, respectively, below the surface of the great mound in which Kish was buried. Crushed down through the centuries, the lower stratum now has a thickness of 18 inches, Prof. Langdon reported. The expedition workers have bared a length of some 180 feet of this stratum, all of which shows convincing evidence of the earlier flood.

Previous work of the Field-Oxford expedition had revealed Kish as the first city founded after the Biblical flood and indicated that the Sumerians had there established what is believed to be the world's earliest civilization, which Prof. Langdon estimates began before 4000 B. C.

The Field Museum pointed out that the findings announced today seem to indicate that the first civilization at Kish was therefore probably nearly wiped out by the earlier flood, that the city was then reestablished after the waters receded, only to suffer again from the deluge of which the Bible tells and it was finally again reestablished when that flood was over.

The museum authorities regarded the expedition's discoveries as being one of the greatest steps yet made toward reconciling the results of scientific research with Biblical accounts of civilized man's early history.

HOOVER IS PLEDGED DRY GROUP BACKING

Atlanta Temperance Leader Promises Support in Law Enforcement Drive.

FARM RELIEF DISCUSSED

(Associated Press.)

Assurance that the temperance forces of the Nation are rallying unitedly to the support of his plans for law enforcement and suggestions for meeting the agricultural problem as it affects the cotton crop were given rPesident Hoover yesterday by two callers from the Southern States.

From Arthur J. Barton, of Atlanta, chairman of the commission on social service of the Southern Baptist Convention and president of the National Conference of Organizations Supporting the Eighteenth Amendment, Mr. Hoover received congratulations on having taken a "broad, sane position" on law enforcement.

"I had a very full, frank and satisfactory conference with the President," Mr. Barton said, after leaving the Chief Executive's office. "We discussed his law enforcement plans and not the merits of prohibition.

"The united temperance forces of the country are heartily backing the President in his plans for effective enforcement of all law, whether it be the national prohibition act, or any other law.

Lauds Hoover Action.

"Personally, I am very glad that the President is taking the broad, sane position that all his friends expected him to take, and is projecting his plans accordingly."

The President still is hiding his time in the selection of the commission for a study of law enforcement and court procedure.

The name of Newton D. Baker, of Cleveland, Secretary of War in the Wilson Cabinet, was advanced today for a place on the commission by Senator Fess (Republican), Ohio, during a conversation with press correspondents. The senator visited the White House to arrange for a call on the President at some time in the future to take up a number of matters with the Chief Executive.

The subject of farm relief was brought up by Joseph O. Thompson, of St. Matthew, S. C., vice president of the American Cotton Association. He told Mr. Hoover he hoped the farm measure to be worked out at the special session of Congress would encourage the establishment of stabilization corporations for handling the seasonal surplus cotton crops, backed by cooperative marketing organizations throughout the South.

Urges Federal Loans.

His plan envisioned loans from Federal funds to cotton planters on crops held in storage by the stabilization corporation, with the whole structure supervised and assisted by a Federal farm board.

Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, daughter of the late William Jennings Bryan, today paid her first visit to the White House as Democratic representative from Florida. With Senator Fletcher (Democrat), of the same State, she discussed with Mr. Hoover the problem of controlling the flood waters of Lake Okeechobee.

This is a subject with which the President is thoroughly familiar through a personal inspection of the territory just before he returned to Washington for his inauguration. Mr. Owen said the Chief Executive indicated his sympathy with the project, but did not make clear the extent to which he is willing that the Federal Government should go in meeting the costs of the flood protective measures.

Federal patronage in the State of New York is to be the subject of a conference tomorrow evening between the President, Charles D. Hilles, of the Republican national committee; H. Edmund Machold, State chairman, and William H. Hill, of New York City, the leader of an independent organization which supported Mr. Hoover in the campaign. With Representatives Snell and Parker, of New York, they were invited to the White House for dinner with the Chief Executive.

Hilles, Machold and Hill recently were appointed by Mr. Hoover to constitute a State patronage committee, while Snell and Parker were selected by the Republican members of the New York congressional delegation to act as their representatives on patronage questions.

Beggar Forfeits $10 Bond.

Raymond Stuck, a cripple, of 1326 L street northwest, failed to appear at Police Court yesterday to defend himself on a charge of soliciting alms without a license, and his bond of $10 was ordered forfeited. Stuck was arrested Saturday night near the Takoma Theater. Police who arrested him said he had $14.97 at the time.

TRADITIONAL TALKS DROPPED BY HOOVER

Red Cross and D. A. R. Will Get No Addresses Due to Press of Work.

TWO PLANNED FOR YEAR

thought to be a desire on his part not to make more than three a year.

Already two are on the books for this year, that at Arlington on Memorial Day, and that at the annual meeting of the Associated Press in New York, April 27. The latter has come in recent years to be traditional.

The limitation on the number of speeches to be made annually would, of course, not apply to nor include a series that he might make on another good-will trip to Mexico and the Caribbean Islands, as he is expected to do when the pressure of work lets down. Neither would it embrace the possibility of his going before the country with a proposal on which he wanted the Nation's support, which is easily conceivable with a man of Mr. Hoover's temperament.

It is with a view to holding down the routine speeches, the demands that have heretofore been made upon the President from this locality or that, from various agencies which want to enhance certain gatherings or occasions by his presence.

Mr. Coolidge complained about it. The general public, he said on more than one occasion, did not realize how burdensome these demands were.

But although Mr. Coolidge complained, he did not break away from custom, especially that phase of it which demanded his appearance at the Red Cross and D. A. R. gatherings.

It is emphasized that it is not the time required to make the speech nor necessarily the time involved in traveling to the place where the speech is to be made. But it is the long research entailed. Unlike other persons, the President can not just get up and talk about the weather. On these public occasions he is expected to say something. His words are transmitted all over the world.

Mr. Coolidge had an aid who did nothing else but research and so did President Harding. Mr. Hoover undoubtedly has was of getting all the information he wants on any subject himself, but the place occupied by men under Coolidge and Harding has not exactly been filled in Mr. Hoover's scheme of things.

Lawrence Richey is probably one of the three secretaries that might be closely identified with this place, but Richey's services are not the looking up of material on which speeches can be made. He is general personal representative to the President.

The speechmaking demands became so exacting upon Mr. Coolidge, in fact, that on some occasions he confined his remarks to a recital of the history of the anniversary on which he might be speaking. He would comment on Lincoln or whoever's birthday it happened to be.

Mr. Hoover is of the mind that the country generally approves of Washington, Lincoln and others of historical fame, and that there is no need of frequently appearing in public to indorse them. It is rather his attitude that when the country hears from its President it wants to hear something of his stewardship and his plans for the future.

Certainly it is all the country has a right to expect of him. It is unfair, both he and Mr. Coolidge believe, to attempt to make Chautauqua lecturers of Presidents.

Besides, Mr. Hoover does not like to make speeches anyway and for those that he must he prefers the radio. The cutting down of speeches follows closely upon the curtailing of another institution—the handshaking line.

U. S. TROOPS MOVED AS BAR TO REBELS

Cavalry Sent From Fort Bliss to Columbus to Reinforce Immigration Chiefs.

TWO ARMIES IN RETREAT

(Associated Press.)

Movement of more American troops on the Mexican border was in progress yesterday, presumably with a view of reinforcing American immigration officials as a precautionary step to stem a possible wholesale tide of rebel entry into this country.

Acting on his own authority, Maj. Gen. William Lassiter, commander of the Eighth Army Corps Area, at San Antonio, ordered a platoon of cavalry from Fort Bliss, El Paso, to Columbus, N. Mex., and directed Brig. Gen. George Van H. Moseley, jr., commander of Fort Bliss, to make an investigation of general conditions at the border city of Columbus.

These orders were communicated to the War Department and while no further instructions were sent from this city, the indications were that the American forces would stand by to give aid in the event it should be needed by immigration officials in dealing with the situation.

Up to State Department.

Secretary Good said emphatically that no orders had been issued to border troops, except that nothing should be done by the army to give cause for apprehension by residents there. He said that the carrying out of the American policy at the border line was entirely in the hands of the State Department.

The policy of the American officials at the border has never been officially defined and while the State Department believes in the Pan American Treaty which, if in effect, would permit this Government to detain rebels coming across the border, obstacles seem likely to arise because of the absence in international or American law of any provision to hold individuals merely because they are rebelling against a constituted government.

The presumption, however, is that the immigration officials will be, or have been, instructed to employ all provisions of the immigration laws in an effort to keep the rebels in Mexico. Under American law it would be comparatively easy for a rebel to be deemed guilty of conducting a conspiracy against a constituted foreign government on American soil and under this provision he could be incarcerated.

7,000 U. S. Troops on Border.

An examination of Army records discloses there are about 7,000 American troops and 500 officers in posts directly on the border, while at stations within a comparatively short distance from the border there are large numbers of troops in readiness and available for use.

The largest unit of troops on the border is stationed at Fort Bliss, where 2,600 men are quartered. Some of these already have been sent to Naco and Columbus, both ports of entry. At Fort Huachuca, Ariz., there are 950 men, at Fort Clark, Tex., 700; at Camp Marfa, Tex., 600, while another 1,000 are essembled at Forts Brown, Ringgold and McIntosh, Tex. Another 800 are at Camps H. J. Jones and S. D. Little, both in Arizona, and others are stationed at posts in California.

The only report from revolutionary centers in Mexico received at the State Department yesterday was from Consul Blocker at Mazatlan. He reported that federal airplanes had ascertained that the rebel forces at Modesto had gone back northward in Sinaloa and that rebels at LaCruz were retreating northward toward Culiacan.

Miner's Theater Ravaged by Blaze

Famous Old Playhouse, Soon to Open to Revivals, Badly Damaged.

New York, March 18 (A.P.).—The historic Miner's Old Bowery Theater, 165 the Bowery, where a revival of Augustin Daly's melodrama, "Under the Gaslight," was to open soon was ravaged by fire early today.

The fire, starting apparently in the balcony, spread with great rapidity through the entire five-story structure. The firemen worked more than an hour before the blaze was controlled. The building was opened in 1878 by the late Henry Clay Miner.

Weber and Fields, David Warfield and many other stars appeared on its stage. Lately the house has been known as the Royale, presenting Italian burlesque performances and motion picture shows.

Crisis Past in Illness Of Constance Bennett

Paris, March 18 (A.P.).—Constance Bennett, American actress, was said by her physicians to be out of danger and resting comfortably tonight. It was learned today that she entered a private hospital near St. Lazare Station, in the heart of Paris, five days ago, and was operated on for acute appendicitis. She developed peritonitis and was perilously ill for a few hours, but has rallied.

Phillip M. Plant, her husband until a divorce decree was issued by the Paris courts a few days ago, remained in close attendance on his former wife during the crisis, but now plans to sail on Wednesday for home on the liner Ile de France. Miss Bennett is a daughter of Richard Bennett, the actor.

MEXICAN FEDERALS SWEEPING DURANGO

Rebels Fleeing From Torreon Prepare to Make Stand in Desert Area.

MAZATLAN RAID PLANNED

Gen. Ramon Iturbe was advancing from the north, making slow but steady progress despite the handicap of destroyed railroad facilities.

Gen. Jaime Carrillo, commanding federal troops here has taken no defensive steps. His plans are not known.

Retreat of 100 Miles.

Juarez, Chihuahua, March 18 (A.P.). Bombed from the air and facing the steady machine-like advance of federal columns under Gen. P. Elias Calles, revolutionary forces today evacuated their stronghold at Torreon, Coahuila. They retreated 100 miles to the north through the desolate mountainous area of Durango.

Torreon was abandoned at dawn as federal cavalrymen proceeded toward the city. An early attack yesterday had terrorized the populace.

Gen. Jose Gonzalo Escobar, the rebel commander in chief, arrived a few hours later with his command at Escolan, a small city in the far southeastern corner of Chihuahua.

Escolan is approximately 100 miles north of Torreon and to reach it the rebel forces crossed a part of the State of Durango. The city is on the Mexican National Railway line, which the revolutionary forces control in Chihuahua. The northward flight of the insurgents tonight had brought the main force of the rebellious army to a point approximately 350 miles south of the American boundary.

Plans of the revolutionary leaders were kept secret, but government adherents expressed belief that Gen. Escobar's army would proceed farther northward to Chihuahua City, capital of the state, about 200 miles south of El Paso.

Four Civilians Killed.

Gen. Escobar maintained his headquarters at Torreon in a train at the railroad yards and his forces were prepared to move momentarily in an eventuality. The railroad yards, as well as Escobar's quarters in the Francia Hotel, were the target of federal airmen who dropped several bombs on the city Sunday.

Four civilians were killed and several wounded in the attack. No damage to railroad equipment or injuries to military men were reported.

The mountainous territory between the border of the States of Durango and Chihuahua and the City of Chihuahua offers several natural places for fortification, described in some instances as even better than was afforded the rebel command in Torreon. Whether the retreat to the north would continue or the rebel command would entrench for a decisive combat with the 30,000 men headed by Gen. Calles was a matter of speculation.

Attempts to Burn Home.

In Juarez, where developments at Torren were heard by an excited public, an attempt was made today to burn the home of Gen. Marcelino M. Murrietta, the rebel chieftain in this city. Fire, which started in a front room behind the entrance hall, exploded several shells before it was brought under control. A boy giving the name of Carlos Perez was arrested as he was leaving the house. Another youth escaped.

Revolutionary leaders said they found on Perez a book showing membership in an organization known as "Lacrom," sympathetic toward the Calles forces and the government of Portes Gil.

Today's successes by the federal forces followed by only 24 hours a skirmish in which the rebels claimed an important victory at San Pedro near Torreon. In the fighting, the revolutionaries claimed 200 were killed by rebels who attacked the government forces from two sides. The rebels also announced the capture of 1,200 prisoners and several airplanes.

Takes Stand in Oasis.

Escalon, Chihuahua, Mexico, March 18 (U.P.).—Gen. Jose G. Escobar, Mexican rebel commander in chief, after evacuating Torreon today set up his headquarters at this oasis in the Chihuahua desert, 100 miles northeast of Torreon.

For days Gen. Escobar had been moving troops to Torreon, expecting to meet there in perhaps the most crucial battle of the present revolution, Plutarco Elias Calles, federal secretary of war, leading federal soldiers from the south.

When Calles had approached to within a few miles of Torreon last night, Gen. Escobar suddenly roused his sleeping army there and rushed his troops to Escalon, a railorad center and the only place within a wide section of desert where water is available.

Strategic Value Seen.

Rebels declared that Gen. Escobar's move in no wise indicated any fear of defeat on his part. Rather, they said, the setting up of field headquarters here was to lure federals as far north as possible. It was pointed out that the farther north the federals are forced to go the farther they will be from their supplies and the stronger will be the rebel army.

Predictions were made freely that Gen. Escobar might attempt even to draw the federals as far north as Chihuahua City, rebel capitol of the State of Chihuahua. Chihuahua City is 225 miles from Juarez, Mexico, across the international border from El Paso, Tex. Rebels are in complete control of the whole state with most of their military and financial strength centering around Chihuahua City.

Passenger Train Attacked.

Mexico City, March 18 (A.P.).—Dispatches to El Universal Grafico from San Miguel Allende, in the State of Guanajuato, state that rebels attacked the Laredo-Mexico City passenger train early this morning. The rebels tore up tracks and derailed several coaches. There were no casualties. Railroad headquarters in Mexico City has received no confirmation of this attack.

Juarez, Chihuahua, March 18 (A.P.). Two well known citizens of Torreon are on their way to Washington as emissaries of the revolutionists to confer with President Hoover, it was announced at revolutionary headquarters here today.

They are Francisco Santa Maria, prominent lawyer, and Serzain Ugarte, former secretary to president Venustiano Carranza. They are expected to arrive here by train and will fly to Washington from El Paso.

The government tonight announced that some rebel leaders in the north, including Gov. Caraveo, of Chihuahua, had sued for peace through the Mexican consul at El Paso and had sought to negotiate with the federals for the end of the revolution. President Portes Gil was said to have telegraphed the consul that he could not treat with traitors and that disloyal generals and responsible leaders must face the consequences.

Witch Doctor's Murder Mystery.

Rome, Ga., March 18 (A.P.).—An explanation of the death of Miss Martha Russell, 80-year-old witch doctor, found slain in her home last night, was sought today at a coroner's inquest.

A man in search of advice, found the woman with her skull crushed and her throat cut. Police believe she was killed by a dissatisfied client, for the discovery of $200 in her home led them to disregard a robbery theory. Police said she had practiced witchcraft for many years.

exact legislation suitable for citizens of the National Capital.

O'Brien also spoke against the appointment of an outsider as successor to Hesse.

"We don't need an Army officer to run our Police Department. We have good enough timber within the department to fill the job. We don't want any one who only has a theory either," O'Brien said.

Edgar C. Snyder, United States marshal for the District and active in local Republican ranks, in praising the record of Maj. Hesse, characterized the position of superintendent of police as the "graveyard of blasted hopes."

Marshal Snyder called on the citizens of the District to "sell their hammers" and pull together with those who are trying to make the Nation's Capital a model city for the world. Before officials can succeed in doing this, "we must stop the anvil chorus," Snyder said.

Colladay Praises Major.

Edward F. Colladay, Republican leader of the District of Columbia, in praising the record of Hesse, and in referring to the charges which have been made at various times against the Police Department and its officials, declared "there never has been any danger of injustice prevailing."

Colladay also praised the records of other officials of the District Government who, he said, "are worthy of unabated confidence of the people of Washington." Colladay, though expressing no choice among the candidates for Hesse's post, said Washington's chief of police always should be chosen from the ranks of the department.

Others who spoke included District Commissioners Taliferro and Dougherty, Maj. L. E Atkins, assistant Engineer Commissioner, George Offutt, Dr. F. E. Gibson, Edward Murphy, George Plitt, vice president of the Board of Trade, and Ben Webster, executive secretary.

Maj. Hesse was presented with a traveling bag by the committee.

Scotland Yard Cleared Of Third-Degree Charges

London, March 18 (A.P.).—The royal commission which has been investigating police procedure in London since Miss Irene Savidge charged Scotland Yard with having used third-degree methods to extract information from her has completed its report. It is understood that this report exonerates the police.

The Savidge case caused a sensation last spring. Sir Leo Money, former member of Parliament and journalist, was arrested in Hyde Park with Miss Savidge on a charge of improper conduct. The case was dismissed.

Ottinger Holdup Victim At Door of His Home

New York, March 18 (A.P.).—Albert Ottinger, former State attorney general and the Republican candidate for governor last year, was held up early today in front of his home on West Seventy-fifth street and robbed of $75.

He had spent the evening at a club and reached home in a taxicat about 1 o'clock. As he started up the steps of his home a man stepped to his side and pressed a revolver against his body. The robber ordered him to walk up the steps. After receiving the $75 he ordered Mr. Ottinger to unlock the door and enter the vestibule. He then ran.

Bankruptcy Petition Filed.

A petition in voluntary bankruptcy was filed yesterday by Sam Narcisenfield, of 1424 Decatur street northwest, at the District Supreme Court. Through Attorney Milton King, the petitioner declared his debts at $8,767.78 and his assets at $3,000.

JURY HOLDS FATHER AS POISON PLOTTER

Levy Vick, Farmer, Indicted in Alleged Attempt to Take Son's Life.

INSURANCE HELD MOTIVE

Courtland, Va., March 18 (A.P.).—A little packet of whitish powder swung the balance today in Southampton Circuit Court when a grand jury returned a bill of indictment, charging Levy Vick, farmer, living in the Newsoms District in Southampton with having solicited two negroes to administer poison to his son, Hugh Vick, 22. The elder Vick denied the charge.

Trial of the accused farmer was set for Wednesday, April 17, by Judge James L. McLemere, presiding over the court, and Vick was put under $1,000 bond for his appearance then. Bond of John Sutton and Robert Crocker, the negroes was continued at $500, the amount set at a justice's hearing in Newsoms last Monday.

Vick is charged with having bargained with Suttoh and Crocker to poison his son, who operates a barber shop at Severn, N. C., just across the State line from Southampton County. According to the two negroes, they were to give the son a drink of poisoned whisky.

The negroes testified before the grand jury today—repeating testimony they had given in the justice's hearing last Monday—that Vick gave Sutton an envelope containing a white powder, telling them to drop the powder into the whisky before giving it to his son. In return, they testified, they were to receive $500 each from insurance policies totaling $13,000 carried on the younger Vick's life.

A. W. Tucker, constable at Newsoms, testified to having heard Vick tell Crocker: "It must be done tonight" and to having seen Vick give the negro a small package. Tucker said his curiosity was aroused and that, after Vick left he questioned Crocker and was told of the alleged offer.

was admitted that such incidents of illegal and unconstitutional raids and searches of homes as were admitted by Capt. Guy Burlingame should never be permitted and were reprehensible and a violation of law in themselves. But they are human, and, inasmuch as they were praised rather than condemned for such actions, the police officials refuse to be officially excited about the incidents.

While no time limit was fixed by Maj. Hesse within which his commanders are to make their reports it was said that all should have submitted their reports by the end of the month.

Text of Hesse Order.

The general order issued by Maj. Hesse follows:

"To precinct and bureau commanders:

"It is the wish of this department to furnish the United States attorney with information on such places as may properly be proceeded against in an effort to secure padlock injunctions.

"The United States attorney invites attention to the fact that in such proceedings it is necessary to show such a continuity of violations as to establish the fact that the particular premises are being used as a regular course of business for the keeping or possession or sale of liquor, and in submitting the reports herein called for it is directed that you select such places as are now being conducted as a nuisance, and wherein the evidence of such violations is within a period of time reasonably near to the institution of such proceedings.

Nature of Evidence Cited.

"The general nature of the evidence essential in such cases is as follows:

"(a) A complete description of the premises which are alleged to constitute the nuisance.

"(b) The names of the proprietor of the place, together with his assistants, clerks or employes.

"(c) Kind of business which is being conducted in said premises, that is, near-beer saloon, cigar store or whatever the character of the business may be.

"(d) The dates of each violation, together with the person who committed the violation, and the amount of liquor sold or possessed on each occasion, and the person to whom the sales were made with respect to each separate sale or possession.

"(e) The persons arrested and the amounts of liquor seized on each particular raid, with the names of the arresting and seizing officer.

"(f) The owner of the real estate upon which the premises in question are located.

"(g) And other facts which bear upon the proof of the existence of the nuisance upon the particular premises in question.

Separate Reports Ordered.

"It is therefore directed that you personally make a most thorough and exhaustive examination of your records of arrests for violations of the national prohibition act and that you cause to be prepared and forwarded to these headquarters, over your signature, separate and distinct reports on each premises in your precinct where the conditions which have existed in the past with respect to violations of the national prohibition act are such as to justify padlock proceedings.

"In each such case you will furnish all details of evidence and information herein indicated as necessary and essential to the United States attorney in the preparation of the case, the information to be complete and accurate and to be in the sequence indicated in subparagraphs "(c)" to "(g)" of this order.

"You are hereby authorized to temporarily assign a member of your command to the special duty of preparing these reports, which, however, must be done under your personal supervision.

"Such reports will be forwarded to headquarters as soon as properly prepared."

EDWIN B. HESSE,
Major and Superintendent.

U. S. WORLD COURT FORMULA ACCEPTED

American Approval Expected, but Doubt Exists as to Views of 40 Nations.

DECISION IS UNANIMOUS

Geneva, March 18 (A.P.).—The first great step for the entrance of the United States to the world court of justice has been taken. The commission of eminent international jurists today unanimously accepted the fundamental ideas of the formula of Elihu Root for acceptance of the American conditions for membership.

Other important steps remain. The American Senate must ratify what the veteran American statesman has done at Geneva. More than that, the more than 40 states which now belong to the court must set their seals of approval on today's agreement before American adhesion can become an accomplished fact.

League officials tonight seemed convinced that there will be no difficulty about the American Senate because the text of the agreement was cabled to Washington and Mr. Root himself was believed to have given his final approval only when he had received advices from Washington that the text was agreeable to the Government.

May Sign in September.

The officials did not seem so sanguine as to the 40 other states. They pointed out that there is always a possibility that some one state may rebel against the American conditions as according too privileged a position to the United States.

The agreement reached today will be sent to the United States and to all members of the council of the League of Nations. The council at Madrid in June will receive a covering report from Sir Cecil Hurst, British jurist, who took a leading part in bringing the agreement into form, and will send the text to all members of the court. If no objection is forthcoming the protocol may be signed by all states during the September assembly of the league.

Unanimous approval by all states is necessary. If any objections are filed an international conference to discuss the protocol will be inevitable.

In order to avoid the appearance that the United States would have a permanent representative with the league to discuss political matters, the jurists decided to soften the phraseology suggested by Sir Cecil Hurst as an amendment to the original Root formula. Sir Cecil recommended that the league's secretary general inform some person to be designated by the United States of any proposal before the council for obtaining an advisory opinion. The text finally approved says that the league shall inform the United States "through any channel designated by the United States."

U. S. Has Right to Quit.

The protocol gives the United States an opportunity to discuss any American objections to a proposed advisory opinion with the league council before the council votes. If the United States prefers to have an exchange of views after the request has reached the court at The Hague they can take place then and the court must stay all proceedings pending the result of negotiations.

The United States has the right to resign from the court if it feels it can not abandon its objections to any request for an advisory opinion on a question possessing an interest for the United States. If the United States resigns, the protocol accepting American conditions immediately ceases to have any force; however other members of the court are not given so privileged a position. Two-thirds of them must denounce the American conditions before the protocol can die after having once become operative.

Should two-thirds of the states denounce the document which outlines the American conditions, the United States would not thereby be driven from the court. She could stay, but only as a regular member without any privileged position.

The World Court was created in 1920 by what is called "the protocol of signature of the statute." In 1926, there was elaborated a special protocol treating on American reservations which the United States found unsatisfactory. Today's agreement is a new protocol to replace the unsuccessful one of 1926.

Two Held in Sewer Graft Get 8 Years

Berg and Levin, Convicted in Queens Borough Scandal, Allowed Appeal.

New York, March 18 (A.P.).—Terms of four to eight years each in Sing Sing Prison today were imposed on Frank M. Berg, jr., and Albert Levin, Queens County politicians, who were convicted last week for attempted bribery of George U. Harvey, Queensborough president.

Judge Frank Adel, who sentenced the men, granted a stay of execution until April 1 to permit counsel to file an appeal for a certificate on reasonable doubt.

Under the Baumes criminal laws Berg and Levin must serve at least four years of their sentence and the balance will be determined by their behavior. The two men were convicted on charges brought by Harvey that they had offered him $10,000 of a $200,000 bribe to favor contractors in the so-called Queens sewere graft ring.

Court Plan Allows U. S. To Resign as Last Resort

Protocol Provides for Informing America of Requests for Advisory Opinions and for This Country's Objections, If Any.

Geneva, March 18 (A.P.).—The question of advisory opinions, one of the chief stumbling blocks to American adhesion to the World Court, was handled in article 5 of the protocol agreed upon by the jurists here today. It reads:

"With a view to insuring that the court shall not without the consent of the United States entertain any request for an advisory opinion touching any dispute or question in which the United States has or claims an interest, the secretary general of the League of Nations shall, through any channel designated for that purpose by the United States, inform the United States of any proposal before the council or the assembly of the league for obtaining an advisory opinion from the court thereupon, if desired, an exchange of views as to whether an interest of the United States is affected shall proceed with all convenient speed between the council or assembly of the league and the United States.

"Whenever request for an advisory opinion comes to the court the registrar shall notify the United States theerof, among other states mentioned in the now existing article 73 of the rules of the court, stating a reasonable time limit fixed by the president within which a written statement by the United States concerning the request will be received.

"If for any reason no sufficient opportunity for exchange of views upon such request should have been afforded and the United States advises the court that the question upon which the opinion of the court is asked is one that affects the interests of the United States, the proceeding shall be stayed for a period sufficient to enable such exchange of views between the council or the assembly and the United States to take place.

"With regard to requesting an advisory opinion of the court in any case covered by the preceding paragraphs, there shall be attributed to an objection of the United States the same force and effect as attaches to a vote against asking for an opinion given by a member of the League of Nations in the council or in the assembly.

"If, after the exchange of views provided for in paragraph 1 and 2 of this article, it shall appear that no agreement can be reached and the United States is not prepared to forego its objection, the exercise of powers of withdrawal provided for in article 8 hereof will follow naturally without any imputation of unfriendliness or unwillingness to cooperate generally for peace and good will."

Article 1 of the proctocol distinctly states that the countries signatory of the protocol of 1920 which created the court accept special conditions attached by the United States in the five reservations to its adherence protocol upon the terms and conditions set out in the following articles.

Article 2 says that the United States shall be admitted to participate in the election of judges of the world court on a basis of equality with other nations at the council and assembly. It is practically the same text as article 1 in the protocol of 1926, which the United States never accepted.

Article 3 provides that no amendments shall be made without the consent of all states and article 4 says the court shall render advisory opinions in public session after notice and opportunity for hearing.

Article 6 declares the provisions of the protocal shall have the same force and effect as the statutes of the court itself.

Article 7 stipulates that the present protocol shall come into force as soon as all states which ratified the creative protocol of 1920 and also the United States have deposited their ratifications with the League of Nations.

Finally, article 8 declares that the United States may at any time notify the secretary general of the league that it withdraws its adherence to the protocol of 1920 and the present protocol of adhesion by the United States shall cease to be in force. Any one of the other states may on their part announce withdrawal of their acceptance of the American conditions.

Then follows the important phrase, "the present protocol shall be considered as ceasing to be in force if and when within one year from the date of receipt of the said notification not less than two-thirds of the contracting states other than the United States shall have notified the secretary general of the league that they decided to withdraw the above mentioned acceptance."

Car Scratch Jails Man in Mail Theft

Chicago Bandit Confesses and Names Confederates When Traced.

Chicago, March 18 (A.P.).—A fender scratch, hardly worth noticing, has trapped one of the three men who robbed a mail truck of 17 pouches of mail Friday night. James Horton, of Waukegan, who was arrested, confessed and named his confederates.

There was approximately $1,900 in cash in the 17 pouches. The robbers used a rented automobile for their escape. In returning the machine to the garage it scraped against another car, and Horton, who had rented it under an assumed name, offered to pay the small cost for repairs.

Policeman Edward Schwimmel, who happened to be in the garage, insisted that Horton give a more complete identification than he had supplied when renting the car, and it was thus that Horton's real name and address were learned. Later, when Schwimmel heard of the robbery his suspicions were aroused, and he notified Federal officers.

2 Prisoners, Shot By Mob, Are Dying

Men Wrested From Police After Attacking Their Employer in West.

Marion, Ark., March 18 (A.P.).—Two men, both colored, taken from policemen near here yesterday and forced to run while about fifteen men fired pistols at them, were reported near death today.

The victims, Willie James and T. D. Robinson, were alleged to have attacked A. L. Cockeral at his home near Turrell. They had worked for Cockeral and he was arranging a settlement with them. Mrs. Cockeral came to her husband's assistance, and finally another negro, armed with a shotgun, routed James and Robinson.

While the two were being brought to jail here, men in three automobiles took the prisoners. "Run," the prisoners were ordered, and obeyed. As they started down the road the men emptied their revolvers, wounding one five times and the other eight.

U. S. TO KEEP SILENT ON NAVY LIMITATION

American Delegates to Geneva Disarmament Meeting Agree on Policy Here.

DETAILS REMAIN SECRET

(Associated Press.)

The policy to be followed by the representatives of the United States at the sixth meeting of the preparatory disarmament commission to be held in Geneva beginning April 15 finally was determined yesterday at the State Department by officials directly interested in the project.

The meeting was attended by Secretaries Kellogg, Good and Adams and practically the whole delegation which represented the United States at Geneva last year, including Ambassador Hugh S. Gibson, who again will head the delegation from this country next Monday.

The nature of the decision reached was not disclosed, as the instructions to the delegates always are kept strictly secret. Secretary Kellogg, however, let it be known that the American delegates will not be empowered to discuss the question of naval limitations. If this should be raised, it will be referred to Washington for consideration.

The State Department has not yet officially announced the American delegation, and consequently interest was attached to those attending yesterday's conference. In addition to the three Secretaries and Mr. Gibson, those present included Rear Admiral Hilary P. Jones, retired; Rear Admiral Andrew T. Long, Commander H. C. Train, Majs. George V. Strong and J. N. Greely and Assistant Secretary Castle and J. Theodore Marriner, chief of the division of western European affairs of the State Department.

The meeting at Geneva will resume its study which has been under discussion for some years concerning a limitation and reduction of armaments by agreement and will deal with the power of a country both on land and sea. Its purpose is to prepare a draft treaty to be discussed at a final disarmament conference which would be much broader in scope than that held at Washington in 1921.

American delegates to the meeting have not been instructed to discuss limitation, because the official agenda calls for a discussion of the Russian project for partial disarmement of land forces and the German proposal for publicity with regard to armaments. The American views on naval limitations will come up in 1931 before another meeting of this country with Great Britain, Japan, Italy and France.

Prince George Quits Navy For Foreign Office Post

Health Forces Youngest Son of King to Give Up Sea Life.

PRINCE GEORGE.

London, March 18 (A.P.).—The retirement of Prince George, youngest of the four sons of the king, from active participation in the work of the navy was announced officially tonight.

King George, acting on medical advice, was said to have approved the retirement and further to have decided, with the concurrence of the prime minister, that the prince should be attached to the foreign office in order to gain knowledge of the administration and work of a state department.

Prince George will be the first of the brothers to enter a governmental peace department. The Prince of Wales and the Duke of York both served in the navy and the Duke of Gloucester saw service with the army.

Prince George has completed twelve years of naval service, including the Mediterranean and China stations. Most recently he had been with the West Indian squadron based at Bermuda.

Speaking at a civil service dinner tonight, the prince said that it had been found that the sea-going conditions of naval life were unsuited to his health, but he spoke with feeling of his regret at severing old associations and leaving his many friends.

King George sent a message to the guests, who included Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, expressing his personal gratification at the new career of his son.

Kellogg Planning Trip To Europe for Rest

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Kellogg said yesterday that he had under consideration a trip to Europe some time after he turns over his office to Henry L. Stimson.

His plans in this connection are very indefinite, however, and the Secretary said he could not say for certain when he would go, how long he would stay or what countries he would visit. He did say, though, that the trip would be unofficial and would be for the purpose of taking a long rest.

Surplus in Income Tax Payments Not Decided

(United Press.)

Preliminary reports to the Treasury, Secretary Mellon said yesterday, indicated that income tax returns paid March 15 exceeded estimates of the amount the Treasury expected.

Mellon said it was too early to give definite figures, or to make any revised estimate of the surplus that would be available at the close of the fiscal year, June 30. Increased tax returns, Mellon said, indicate continued business prosperity. He said the figures appeared to show that business in 1928 was as substantial as estimates indicated.

GIRL'S DRESS HIDES WITCHCRAFT NOTES

Cryptic Charms Found When Body Is Examined; Died Near Air Field.

AGED WOMAN MURDERED

Allentown, Pa., March 18 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Three cryptic notes, "divine charms" against murderers and thieves, found in the dress of Verna Octavia Delp, 21-year-old adopted daughter of August Derhammer, of Green Pond, injected more of the air of witchcraft in the mystery of her death, still unsolved, today.

Charles T. Belles, confessed faith healer and said by the adopted parents of the girl to be a "powwow doctor" whom she visited before her death for treatment of skin trouble, was questioned by police, but no arrest has been made.

Doctors are examining the body of the girl to learn what poison or poisons caused the death, so that it may be determined whether she obtained the poisons in an effort to commit suicide, or whether she was forced or duped into taking them. Until this has been decided the investigation will be at a standstill, authorities said.

In the notes found in the bosom of the girl's dress by Coroner Bausch the letters "N. I. R." together with request for divine protection are recurrent. According to a black art manual, the letters are the keys to a supposedly divine charm which affords protection against thieves and murderers.

The girl's body was found late Saturday night in the field adjoining the emergency landing field of the Transcontinental Air Mail Co. near this city. She had apparently walked over the cinder path from the Catasauqua pike to the spot where her body was found.

The girl left her family Friday to visit Belles. A foster brother of the girl, Oscar Kleintop, said that Belles told him that the girl did make the visit.

The police favor the suicide theory.

It's time somebody applied modern common sense to this age old business of selling a suit of clothes.

Charge accounts simply mean postponing "the agony" of paying, for 30 days.

So called "credit" has been loaded down with exorbitant prices and extra charges.

Bond Ten Pay Service surmounts these objections! This modern thrifty service invites you to "pay as you get paid." That's sensible!

"To stay slender—reach for a Lucky a most effective way of retaining a trim figure"

Billie Burke

"To stay slender reach for a Lucky Strike instead of a sweet when your sweet-tooth tempts you. I have practised this for years and find it a most effective way of retaining a trim figure. There is something to the toasting process which develops a flavor in Luckies that completely satisfies the desire for sweets. At the same time, toasting takes out the irritants and Luckies never affect the voice."

Note: Authorities attribute the enormous increase in Cigarette smoking to the improvement in the process of Cigarette manufacture by the application of heat. It is true that during the year 1928, Lucky Strike Cigarettes showed a greater increase than all other Cigarettes combined. This confirms in no uncertain terms the public's confidence in the superiority of Lucky Strike.

WRECK FATAL TO 14 DESCRIBED BY PILOT

Sole Survivor of Air Crash Blames Motors as He Lies Near Death.

5 INVESTIGATIONS BEGUN

New York, March 18 (U.P.).—Lou Foote recovered consciousness today and almost cried as he tried to explain what had caused his big Ford air liner to plunge into a sand car near Newark Airport yesterday, killing the fourteen passengers in the craft.

The pilot is 32 years old and has been flying nine years.

"Honey," he said as he gripped his wife's hand, "my right motor went dead. I was flying about 1,000 feet when it cut. I had a heavy load and was bucking a high wind. I couldn't bank or I would have gone into a tail spin. My only chance was to go straight. I tried to clear the sand car, but I didn't have enough power to gain altitude. That's the last I remembered."

Then he sank back in bed, shuddered at memory of the awful crash, and had to quit talking. He did not know that he was under technical arrest nor did he know how serious the accident had been.

Death Toll Now 14.

The death toll of the accident—on a par with the most serious heavier-than-air crash in the history of aviation—mounted to fourteen today when Belmont Parsons, who had been riding in the control cabin with Foote, died of internal injuries. The thirteen other passengers were killed instantly.

Meanwhile, five investigations are under way. The airport, Mayor Congleton, of Newark; the Commerce Department, the police and the Pioneer Airways, Inc., for whom Foote was flying, all have started independent investigations.

When investigators started this morning they had five possible solutions to what caused the plane to crash. These included:

Shortage of gasoline.
Poor quality of gasoline.
The wind.
Worn out motors.
An overloaded craft.

Most of these solutions were answered today, still leaving the cause unknown. Edward Weatherdon, regular pilot of the air liner, said he personally had inspected the plane before the take-off and ascertained the craft carried sufficient gasoline for four hours flying. Police also said a quanity of gasoline was spilled when the machine went down.

Special Gasoline Used.

The aircraft company said their sight-seeing planes always used a special quality of gasoline and an inspection was underway to determine whether some other gasoline might have been mixed with it.

Aviators at Newark Airport said the wind was not so bad when Foote took off as to cause the accident.

Officials of the aircraft company said that the engines of the Ford craft were supposed to have 1,500 hours of life and that they had been operated only 251 hours. The craft was built to carry 2,500 pounds and had only a load of 2,100 pounds.

Christened by Mrs. Coolidge.

Newark, N. J., March 18 (A.P.).—The ill-starred Colonial Airways Transport plane which crashed yesterday, causing fourteen deaths, was the same one which was christened by Mrs. Calvin Coolidge in Washington last November, by proxy, for another ship that inaugurated regular air service to the West Indies.

A trimotored Fokker named Christopher Columbus, was scheduled to be christened by the first lady, but it was damaged a day before, and officials of the new line hastily chartered the Ford plane from Colonial Airways. The name "Christopher Columbus" was painted on its side before the flight to Washington and removed on its return to Newark.

Historic Ephrata Cloisters Looted of Rare Antiques

Most-Prized Articles Only Taken by Discerning Thief From Home of Original Seventh Day Adventists. 200-Year-Old Padlock Is Broken.

Ephrata, Pa., March 18 (A.P.).—A thief with a knowledge of antiques who robbed the old Ephrata Cloisters of a number of priceless articles antedating the Revolution was the object tonight of a widespread police search.

The Cloisters are remnants of the original Seventh Day Adventists in America and the several buildings comprising the group contain many relics and implements of that period. Colonial soldiers wounded in the Battle of the Brandywine were brought there for treatment and historians generally credit the work of the nuns and fathers there with the founding of the Red Cross movement in this country.

Robbery of the main building, where a small group of adherents of the original faith still worship, was discovered today by the Rev. W. K. Bechtel, the pastor and leader of the cult. A heavy padlock, said to be more than 200 years old, on the doors of the building was broken and the thin wire screening which protected the most valuable of the exhibits was pulled down.

Only the rarest of the antiques were stolen, indicating that the thief was well acquainted with their value. Among the exhibits taken were a three-cornered shelf cupboard, a dough tray and a square umbrella stand of pottery.

give way to determined protest, based chiefly on what is described as "international arrogance" of any nation which insists that the rights of all others must conform to her own conception. In short, when viewed in an international light, American prohibition has only the standing that goes with the right of any single sovereign state to follow its own whim or caprice, and it is conceded that no protest will lie so long as this caprice does not interfere with the rights of other nations. But arbitrary interference with diplomatic immunities is regarded as infringement of the recognized rights of other powers.

Mr. Kellogg's investigation necessarily involves humorous features, especially the check-up on methods employed by foreign governments in bringing liquor into Washington. The British bring their liquor in by truck load, but the trucks are closed like moving vans and the embassy seal protects the lock and permits none to examine the cargo. The Siamese are said to have hired the trucking company which they used after consulting with officials of the British Embassy.

The German Embassy brings its liquor in by open trucks and no efforts are made to disguise the consignments. The same holds true in many other cases. Diplomats have not been worried until Friday over action by the police, but they have been worried about the possible danger of hijackers. Some of the diplomats feel that widespread publicity, especially if coupled with suggestions that they have no legal right to transport the liquor, will increase the danger of hijackers. If this should prove justified, the United States Government would probably be compelled to provide armed guards to escort diplomatic liquor and guarantee its safe delivery. The United States Government is admittedly bound to see that such liquor is not interfered with even if it takes armed escorts to protect the sanctity of the laws protecting the goods and chattels of the diplomat.

SEIZURE OF SIAMESE RUM BRINGS INQUIRY

by the revised statutes for interference with the goods and chattels of a diplomat or a servant in his household. Secretary Kellogg is understood to take the position that the statute covers goods such as were involved in the Siamese case. The charitable inclinations of the Siamese legation are counted upon to avoid the embarrassment of seeking to apply the statute.

Employ Same Methods.

But the methods which the Siamese legation followed were the same which other embassies and legations follow in bringing liquor in to Washington and it is frankly admitted that arbitrary interference by the United States would be a far more serious affair than is generally realized.

In Great Britain, in France in Germany, in Italy, in Japan, and throughout the rest of the civilized world, the American prohibition law is regarded in a distinctly humorous light, according to unanimous interpretation of sentiment in those countries. The comic papers draw much of their material from this isolated position which America has taken in the family of nations. From the international standpoint, America stands as the one dry nation while the rest of the civilized world follows its century-old customs and refuses to concede that any one nation has a monopoly on morality or wisdom because it adopts an isolated policy at variance with that of the rest of the world.

But none of the nations are willing to have America attempt to enforce her isolated policy on them, it is explained. Immediate British, French or German resentment would follow any such attempt, it is added, and the humorous aspects of American prohibition would

Why ATTILIO of Rome

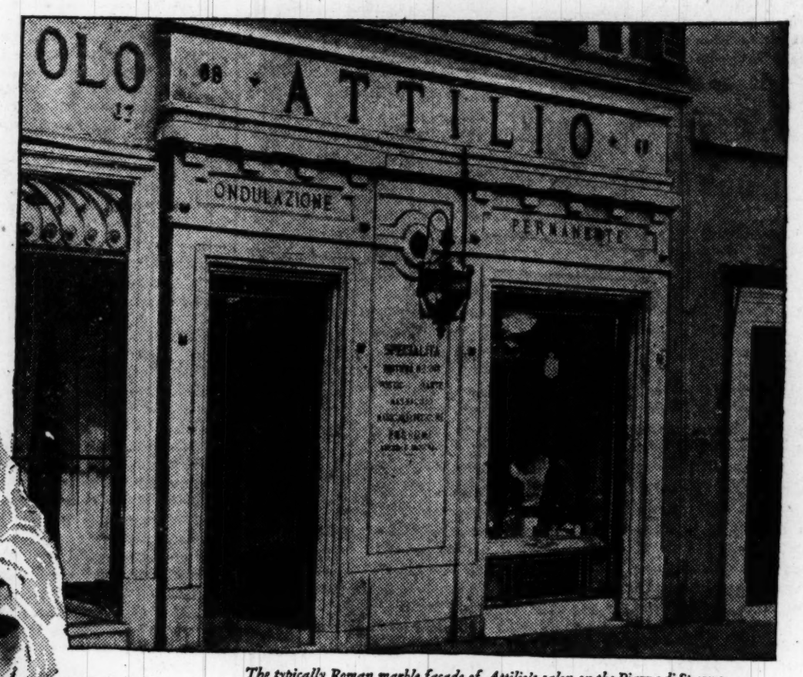
Beauty Specialist to the Italian Royal Family

advises all of his patrician clients to use Palmolive Soap twice daily

"The finest cleansing agents for the skin are, by general consent, olive and palm oils. For that reason, I always ask my clients to help me in the task of improving their complexions by cleansing the skin twice a day with Palmolive Soap, which embodies these two soothing oils in their purest form."

Attilio Colla

PIAZZA DI SPAGNA 68, ROMA



The typically Roman marble facade of Attilio's salon on the Piazza di Spagna, . . . where the patrician ladies of Italian artistic and social life consult the most distinguished of all Roman beauty specialists . . . The lovely fountain in front of St. Peter's—symbol of "The City of Fountains," at the left.

IN Rome, at the foot of the historic "Spanish Stairs," the Piazza di Spagna is encircled with shops that attract the most brilliant society. Here, some years ago, a Ferrara youth came to establish a beauty shop which, today, is the finest place of its kind throughout beautiful Italy. His name is Attilio Colla . . . better known to his patrons as "Attilio."

For years Attilio worked and studied the art of beauty culture in Paris. He then went to Budapest . . . then to Vienna, to London, once more to Vienna . . . always adding to the invaluable store of information which today sets him apart in his chosen field.

In his shop, at 68 Piazza di Spagna, he receives visits from no less a personage than her Majesty, The Queen of Italy. Roman patricians naturally seek his advice on care of the skin. So do women of the moving picture and stage artistocracy.

"I am perfectly certain," says Attilio, "that there are countless complexions which are less lovely than they ought to be, merely because one of the simplest and most natural of all beauty treatments is neglected. I refer to the cleansing of the skin.

"Soap cleanses the skin—cleanses the pores—as nothing else can, and it is the basic essential of successful beauty treatment. Much of the work of the beauty expert is nullified by neglect to follow this simple rule of complexion care. "It is, of course, important to use the right kind of soap, because many kinds are not only unsuitable but positively harmful to the complexion. I always ask my clients to use Palmolive Soap, which embodies the finest cleansing agents for the skin."

The lovely Ada Fontanesi, of Attilio's staff, is a perfect type of Italian beauty.

Attilio's distinguished colleagues, in every great capital of Europe, in every smart resort . . . repeat this same advice. Madame Valentin Le Brun, Lina Cavalieri, of Paris; Pessl, of Vienna and Budapest, advisor to crowned heads of Europe . . . these and dozens of other experts tell their discriminating clients this easily-performed, twice-a-day treatment: massage a smooth lather of Palmolive Soap and warm water into the skin. Allow it to penetrate the pores. Rinse, after two minutes, first with warm water, now with cold. Then—and only then—are you ready for make-up!

If you do not already keep your skin fresh and lovely in this way, take the advice of the world's experts: begin to use Palmolive today!

THE WET-DRY STRUGGLE.

Forces are being marshaled for the greatest struggle in the history of the country over the question of prohibition. While President Hoover is engaged in selecting his commission to investigate the judicial and law enforcement systems, and the courts are beginning to enforce the Jones act, antiprohibitionists are making desperate efforts to counteract the "dry" movement. The vast majority of the people hope that the issue will be brought to a head and settled one way or the other.

In New York the committee of lawyers organized to defend minor offenders against the operation of the Jones law, continues to grow. This organization has undertaken the task of "educating" juries so that they will refuse to convict men for violation of the prohibition law as long as such conviction makes them liable to punishment more severe than that meted out for robbery and manslaughter.

In Rhode Island a bill has been introduced into the legislature, which, if passed, would authorize the attorney general to test the constitutionality of the eighteenth amendment before the Supreme Court. A suit would be filed on the theory that the State legislatures were not qualified under the Constitution to ratify the amendment, because it infringes upon personal rights. It is argued that the people alone have the authority to ratify an amendment of this character, and that therefore it could have been properly done only by a constitutional convention.

Bitter fights are being waged in New York, Maryland, Wisconsin and many other States over the question. The controversy will be further intensified as enforcement becomes more effective as the result of appropriations for new agents and prosecutors made in the last session of Congress. This in turn will stimulate greater opposition and should bring the prohibition question closer to a showdown.

Both sides are ready to overwhelm Mr. Hoover's commission with statistics and programs for solution, all of which must be religiously discarded. If the recommendations of the commission are to be worth anything, its members must avoid the schemes of both wets and drys. The study must be conducted on a scientific basis by qualified jurists who are unbiased and who are not committed to the Volstead act.

In his inaugural address President Hoover emphasized the right of those who do not like the law to work openly for its repeal. In this way the will of the people can be made known. However, the presence of militant forces on either side of the question brings about further complication and renders the task of Mr. Hoover's commission most difficult.

AIRPLANE WRECKS.

The crash of a giant three-motored Ford monoplane at Newark, N. J., on Sunday, climaxes a series of fatal heavier-than-air craft accidents. In September, the French Minister of Commerce and Aviation, and his four companions were killed in a "crack-up" near Toul, and two days later seven persons were killed when a plane nose-dived to earth in Idaho. In October five persons were killed in a mid-air collision near Detroit, and in November six enlisted men were killed when an Army transport plane fell near Dallas. In December, at Spur, Tex., there occurred another fatal crash involving five persons, and two days later fourteen persons were killed in the crash of a seaplane into the harbor of Rio de Janeiro. In January, Lieut. Henry Angell and six enlisted men were killed in a crash at Royalton, Pa., and on Sunday the Ford that fell at Newark carried fourteen persons to their death.

These accidents do not indicate that flying is unusually hazardous. That they have happened with some degree of regularity of late indicates only that flying has become more general. In the early days the railroads experienced frequent wrecks and it is inevitable that the development of the airplane should be marked by accidents. Safety devices have combined to cut the toll of train wreck, however, and safety devices will no doubt combine to make the airplane the safest vehicle known.

In 1928, a total of 1,062 aviation accidents were reported to the Department of Commerce, resulting in 368 fatalities and 672 injuries. Four hundred and fifty-nine planes were totally destroyed during the year. In scheduled flying over regular airways, however, there occurred but nine fatal accidents, involving nine pilots and thirteen passengers. The other fatalities were in miscellaneous flying, including air service operations and experimentation, racing, oceanic flights, &c. Air mail and express planes alone flew 7,500,000 miles during the year with but .00081 per cent of the matter carried lost by fire or other cause. Fallibility of the personal element—errors in judgment on the part of pilots rather than any fault with plane or landing place—accounted for 57.97 per cent of the crashes, and power plant trouble or failure accounted for 15.74 per cent.

Pending the completion of the Department of Commerce investigation of the Newark accident, there should be no disposition to blame the pilot or owners of the plane. The crash, judging by early reports, was caused by power plant failure to which possibly should be coupled fallibility of the human element. Several eyewitnesses realized before the crash occurred that one, and possibly two, of the three motors had failed. Pilot Foote had had long experience with planes similar in all respects to the one that crashed, and it is quite probable that no pilot would have been able to set it down safely in the cleared area he chose for an emergency landing when he realized that motor failure would make it impossible to gain altitude. The tragedy emphasizes the necessity of constant vigilance in the inspection and servicing of planes.

REPUBLICAN AIMS IN THE SOUTH.

Reports that President Hoover has approved plans for building up the Republican party in the South come as an interesting sequence to his exclusion of Southerners from his Cabinet. These two facts probably mean that the President is not overoptimistic about the prospects of holding the Southern support his party gained in the last election, but at the same time he sees an opportunity for development of Republicanism in a number of States south of the Mason and Dixon line. The outcome promises to be one of the most interesting political developments of the coming four years.

The South was visibly disappointed when all members of the Cabinet were drawn from the East, North and West. The Atlanta Constitution deplores the fact that President Hoover "has definitely redrawn the almost obliterated Mason and Dixon line and specifically confirmed the Republican ostracism of the South." The argument that Cabinet members were chosen for their personal qualifications gives little consolation to the Southerners. Many have taken the view that the President has deliberately turned his back on the South, in spite of the excellent support he received. This, of course, is far from being an accurate interpretation of his action, since he has appointed Southerners as Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Assistant Secretary of War.

Reports that the organization for distribution of patronage in the South is to be headed by three Republicans and three Democrats who supported Mr. Hoover for the Presidency indicates that the party is making a definite bid for continued support of the element which bolted the Democratic party in the last campaign. Attempts are being made to draw these groups within the Republican fold, and if they succeed it may mean the definite breaking up of the solid South. It is characteristic of President Hoover that he should seek to strengthen his position by consistent organization rather than indiscriminate handing out of political plums.

Conditions which have caused the traditional division between the North and South in politics are gradually being eliminated. North Carolina, Georgia and some of the other States are making rapid progress toward industrialization, and it is quite natural that there should be a change in the political alignment. This development will no doubt continue with further weakening of the solid South. On the whole, the movement seems to be a creditable one. The situation will be more salutary for both the Republicans and the Democrats if they cease to divide along sectional lines. The coming four years may see considerable Republican activity in the South and Democratic activity in the North. What the effect on the voting public will be is an interesting question to be decided in the next presidential election.

THE ALABAMA FLOODS.

Disasters such as that which has stricken a number of Alabama towns are calculated to bring out the best and the worst in human nature. From the flooded areas come tales of bravery on the part of rescuers and some of those marooned on house tops in want of food and shelter. From the same source there are reports of looting from the thousands of victims who are unable to protect their property.

The situation has prompted Gov. Graves to declare martial law in Elba and Geneva, following reports of looting. Col. Persons, of the Alabama National Guard, has found there are insufficient guardsmen in the flood-stricken area to cope with the situation. It is discouraging to realize that a certain element of the population is depraved enough to take advantage of such a situation to engage in plundering. Characters of this kind will no doubt receive the harsh treatment they deserve at the hands of the State troops.

The picture is brightened to a marked degree by the excellent work of the Red Cross, the Public Health Service and other relief agencies. Desperate efforts are being made to halt the spread of disease among the victims. Refuge camps have been established, and an effort is being made to force all the residents to evacuate the flooded towns. Thousands of persons are still awaiting rescue. Army aviators have dropped tons of food to those still marooned, and heroic efforts are being made to prevent further loss of life.

Gov. Graves has asked for a relief fund of $250,000, and no doubt it will be subscribed without hesitation. The American people are wholly sympathetic with their fellow citizens in such a crisis.

SPIES IN PRISONS.

The resignation of John W. Snook, warden of Atlanta Penitentiary, effective April 1, does not answer the criticism that has been leveled against the Department of Justice for its practice of committing undercover agents to Federal penitentiaries. The department has issued a statement to the effect that Warden Snook was not removed because of his criticism of the spy policy. The resignation was requested, says the department, for the "sole purpose of bringing about a more efficient management," and it adds that "so far as concerns the method of obtaining reliable information about inside prison conditions it need only be said that there are no so-called undercover men in any Federal prison" at the present time. "The government of prisons," the statement says further, "is a complex and difficult problem. We propose to consider the whole problem with a view of bettering conditions."

No one will question the assertion that the government of prisons is complex and difficult. Prison populations are not composed of desirable citizens. The maintenance of discipline in a body composed of outlaws must always be beset with difficulties. Strong men are needed as wardens of penitentiaries, and they must be given all possible assistance in the prosecution of their difficult task.

Introduction of a spy to a penitentiary is admission that confidence has lapsed in its warden or in one or more of his assistants. As soon as the convicts hear it rumored that a spy is in their midst, the authority of their guards and the warden is lessened. Quite aside from the fact that the use of spies under any circumstances is repugnant to the American mind, stands the fact that spies break down discipline without which prisoners can not be held in check. It would be wise if the Department of Justice were to announce publicly that undercover agents no longer will be introduced into prisons. Surely if the department decides that a change in prison management is advisable it does not first have to obtain information against those in office through spies.

BETTER HEADLIGHTS NEEDED.

Humorists have suggested that the day is not far distant when it will be considered necessary to make all pedestrians carry tail lights after dark. Now it appears that engineers not only have been considering the suggestion seriously, but that they have been experimenting with various types of pedestrian tail lights. The object was to learn what natural conditions make for safety, and the experiments were carried out by affixing to pedestrians various substitutes for tail lights and placing them on highways to be spotted by observers riding in automobiles.

It was proved that white objects are most visible on unlighted roads. A white suit of clothing proved most satisfactory, while a man attired in a dark suit standing but 100 feet ahead in the bright headlights of an oncoming automobile was found to be virtually invisible. One of the best signals was found to be a white handkerchief carried in the hand of the pedestrian, particularly if there happened to be sufficient breeze blowing to make it flare open from time to time. As a result of the experiments the engineers have rated bright headlights inadequate because, unless assisted by reflecting qualities in the clothing of pedestrians, they did not bring the walker into clear view until the automobile was practically on top of him. Highways lighted with street lamps were judged to be the only practicable method of bringing about absolutely safe highways after nightfall.

Some day the highways of the United States may all be satisfactorily illuminated. For the time being, however, motorists have only their headlights to depend upon after darkness sets in, and pedestrians can only hope and pray, when they venture upon well-traveled highways after dark, that the headlights of oncoming cars are adequate. Pedestrians can help matters by carrying lanterns or handkerchiefs to serve as warnings of their presence, but, in the final analysis, the need in the interest of greater highway safety is for improved automobile headlights. Here is a task to which illumination engineers can profitably devote their most serious attention.

HUDSON RIVER BRIDGE.

By HOWARD A. HERTY,
in the Professional Engineer.

It is almost impossible to visualize the size of the Hudson River Bridge before completion. The four main cables which will be sunk into the anchorage will carry a load of 168,000,000 pounds; will contain 106,000 miles of steel wire and will weigh 28,500 tons. They are being produced and will be erected at a cost of $12,339,997 by the John A. Roebling's Sons Co., of Trenton, which concern also designed and built the Brooklyn Bridge.

The towers of the span will each be 670 feet above water level and will contain 80,000,000 pounds of structural steel encased in reinforced concrete. Each will be large enough to surround the Washington Monument. The concrete anchorage of the Hudson River Bridge will be faced with granite blocks, to follow the general decorative work as outlined by the architect, Cass Gilbert.

The bridge will cost $75,000,000 at a minimum. It will have an over-all length of 4,800 feet and a central span of 3,500 feet. It will open for traffic early in 1932. In the first year of operation, it is estimated, it will produce toll revenues exceeding $4,000,000 from 3,148,000 vehicles carrying 19,900,000 passengers; 500,000 buses and 1,500,000 pedestrians.

The four great cables which will carry the bridge are approximately 36 inches in diameter, and by far the largest ever built. They are supported on the Jersey side by being fastened to the Palisades through tunnels which have been blasted through the trap rock. On the New York side, Nature was not so kind. In order to fasten the 28,000-ton strands of the supporting cable, it was necessary to cast a block on concrete—the largest mass of concrete thus far ever assembled.

This man-made cliff will weigh 214,000 tons. It will be 320 feet long, 220 feet wide and will rise to a height of 100 feet above Manhattan Island's bedrock, to which it will be fastened. This anchorage will be twice as large as the Camden anchorage, which is at present the largest in the world. It will be four and one-quarter times as large as that of the historic Brooklyn Bridge. This item of the bridge alone will cost more than $1,000,000. Each of the four great cables, as they are imbedded into this massive block, are spread in the appearance of five great fingers. Each of these twenty units are fastened into great eye-bolts. These in turn are fastened to immense steel beams which are imbedded in the great mass of 214,000 tons of mixed concrete.

The great anchorage, being approximately 1,000 feet back from the Hudson River, the New York Central Railroad, and close to Riverside Drive presented problems in construction. The engineers were confronted with the task of assembling and mixing the raw materials for this gigantic cliff, without blocking Riverside Drive—one of New York's main traffic arteries—for nearly a year.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Waste of Farm Lands.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Referring to the article contained in your issue of March 16, permit me to say that your pen could be employed to no better purpose than in spreading the warning contained in the recent report of the Department of Agriculture about the destruction and waste of top soil due to erosion.

This waste is particularly great in the case of fields planted in crops that must be cultivated with a shovel plow, such as corn. In comparatively recent years a thoughtful North Carolina farmer adopted the plan of terracing the steep slopes of his fields for the purpose of arresting waste due to washing or erosion; and this method was so successful as to have been quite generally adopted in that section. Indeed, the terracing has been done so as to conserve the rainfall and keep the ground moist for a materially longer period than would have otherwise been the case; thus accomplishing a double purpose. FARMER.

From a 12-Year-Old.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In answer to Helen Auguste Colhoun, I believe any fair person would see the injustice of preventing the freedom of speech among children, as well as among adults. I thought the policy of "children should be seen and not heard" was replaced by more sensible views. Now people try to bring out the individuality of the child.

What is the use of education? Why should the children be taught the Constitution, if they can not express it? What shall we expect of our next generation if it is going to be suppressed?

Disrespectful? Is it disrespectful to correct one who is wrong? I would like to remind Helen Auguste Colhoun that no adult seemed to think of the Chief Justice's mistake—the child was more keen than they.

Chief Justice Taft knew he was wrong, and he was very gentle and kind to the little girl. He showed wisdom and justice.

Now I would like to add that I am a child, too, 12 years old.

ALICIA B. STEWART.

Philippine Independence.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What are we to do with the Philippines? This question forces itself upon the attention of Congress and the Nation. They are an element of weakness to us, without any corresponding benefit. The Filipinos will increase their demands for independence, and the feeling that independence should be granted them will increase among our own people. We originally took them over from Spain as an act of humanity, but the step was a dangerous one for us as it placed us in the attitude of "a world power," practically compelling us to mix up with the politics of Europe.

The islands are a tempting bait to such nations as Japan, and other nations would be glad to take them if an opportunity offered. Let the United States become involved in a war with any power in Europe or Asia and the islands would be lost to us in the twinkling of an eye. They are too far away for us to successfully defend them from attack, and the Filipinos would gladly welcome interference, no matter from what direction it might come.

The islands are at the very gateway to China, and should that great empire again find peace in its own borders the new government will long for possession of the islands. Japan must find an outlet for its surplus population. It has been looking toward Mexico and some of the states of South America, but they are closed. The Philippines would be easy prey. What shall we do? F. J. WHITNEY.

Hoover Ancestry.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I've just read in an old Post an item I had earlier overlooked in its reading, i. e., that Herbert Hoover's "ancestry had been traced" to Baden.

Permit me, a Hoover descendant of the same, to say the ancestry does not require "tracing" to Baden. It is known to the Hoover descendants.

In 1740 three brothers—Andrew, Christian and Jonas—of Swiss ancestry, living in Baden, came to Frederick, Md., and established the Hoover Mills there. President Hoover descends from Andrew. His father, Jesse Clark Hoover, was born in Miami County, Ohio, and died in West Branch, Iowa; his grandfather, Eli Hoover, born Miami County, Ohio, died in Hubbard, Iowa; his great-grandfather, Jesse Hoover, born Hugh Wara River, N. C., married in Miami County, Ohio, and died in West Branch, Iowa; his great-great-grandfather, John Hoover, son of that first Swiss Andrew, of Maryland, in 1740, was born and married in North Carolina and died in Miami County, Ohio.

President Herbert Clark Hoover, second of three children, was but 9 years old when his mother died in 1883, the eldest, Theodore Jesse, being 12 and the youngest, Mary, but 7. The father had died in 1880.

LOUISE DUNHAM GOLDSBERRY.

ORTHOGRAPHIC MELODY.

Whenever the news (as in the present deplorable instance of the flood at Elba) requires mention of names in rural Alabama a perfect burst of orthographic melody comes, says the New York Times. Again the reader hears of the Warrior and the Chattahoochee of Florence and Selma, of Tuskegee and Tallulah. The Creeks gave beautiful names to their country, even though they gave very harsh ones to Gen. Andrew Jackson, and the white settlers of Alabama who drove out the Creeks followed with such dove notes as Tombigbee, the river that sounds Indian but is pure hill-billy.

Now comes into prominence the Pea River, an unheard-of stream in these parts, yet able by flood to stretch its width to 2 miles and inundate a flourishing town. White Water Creek is contributing to the damage, and near by are Burnt Corn and Murder Creeks. The Conecum and Patsaliga are rising; so is the Yellow; and the Choctawhatchie is giving concern. It is bad news, but it sounds much more interesting because of the beauty of the Alabama names. There is even music in Alabama politics. When looking about for a governor, who better could qualify to rule over the valleys of the Tombigbee and the Opelika than a man named Bibb Graves?

If a Man Builds One House, Why Doubt His Ability to Build Another?

By ROBERT QUILLEN

A SCIENTIST of the Smithsonian startled his fellows some weeks ago by declaring that man did not develop from some lower form of life, but first appeared on the earth a million and a half years ago much as he is today.

Other scientists ridiculed the statement, but made no effort to prove it untrue, for they knew the task hopeless.

Men quarrel bitterly about evolution, in so far as it applies to their own species, and the cause of their bitterness is lack of knowledge.

The theory of man's evolution like the theory of heaven and the definition of morality, rests on faith and belief; and discussion of it begins and ends in bitterness because man's opinion is supported by his vanity and to question his opinion is to accuse him of inferior intelligence.

But if the evolution of man can neither be proved nor disproved, there are demonstrable facts to uphold the faith of those who believe their ancestors were much like themselves.

Plants, insects, birds and animals adjust themselves to their environment and the strong survive to develop a new type; but never yet has man found evidence to support the theory that one species can be changed into another.

Climate, selective breeding and environment can develop a new kind of sheep, but apparently they can not transform sheep into swine.

However much the individuals of a species may vary, the species itself remains distinct; and when two species are crossed in violation of nature, the resulting monstrosity is sterile and can not reproduce itself.

Natural laws do not change, and it seems obvious that nature has safeguarded her individual species from the beginning and kept them distinct throughout the whole of their development.

Whatever man may have been when the world was young, it is reasonable to believe he was then as now a creature unlike any other.

And if the modern mind hesitates to believe he was placed on earth as a perfected biped, because that would have been a miracle, can this same modern mind more easily understand the creation of a lower form of life?

If man was at first a fishlike creature in ditch water, some power must have created the fish.

Is it easier to create a fish than a man?

You must concede a beginning—a creation of some kind.

And if you grant that the germ of life was created, why question the lesser miracle of housing the germ in a creature like man?

PRESS COMMENT.

That's What it Is.

Newark Advocate: Robert Ryder speaks of "our normal mean temperature," and that's what we think about it, too.

Come, Come!

Ohio State Journal: We shouldn't wonder if Calvin Coolidge, in his new freedom, would actually swear if he felt like it.

Create a Department.

Indianapolis News: Once more it looks as if it would pay Mexico to create a regular department for suppressing revolutionists, with a seat in the cabinet.

Probably.

Indianapolis Star: Mexico probably would have fewer revolts if the so-called generals had more filling stations to loot.

Distance and Guilt.

Akron Beacon Journal: Distance lends guilt, as well as enchantment. Transporting liquor a mile is wicked; transporting it from the cellar to the living room is hospitality.

Always Mix It.

Macon Telegraph: "Girl Dies After Drinking Bottle of Furniture Polish."—Headline. It'll get you every time if you drink it raw. You got to put ginger ale in it.

And Then Again.

New York Times: And then again the sad estate of the theater may be due to the fact that all the good actors and actresses are devoting their best energies to indorsing cigarettes.

He's Worried.

Richmond Times-Dispatch: Importuned daily by a great army of job-seekers, President Hoover must be more alarmed now than he was during the campaign over the unemployment situation.

What Are "Shapes?"

New Orleans Times-Picayune: Birmingham, Ala., reports a brisk demand there for "shapes." But what can be wrong with those Birmingham girls? There's no trouble among the sex at Mobile or other Alabama points with which we are familiar.

Why, Oh Why?

Kansas City Star: Another great mystery is why a prominent clubwoman, when she sits for her photograph and gets a whole handful of proofs to select from, always decides on the one that makes her look most like a clubwoman.

Just Waiting.

Louisville Courier Journal: Emil Ludwig, the biographer, who is visiting Rome, says it is too early to write the life of Mussolini. The author of the life of the former kaiser is perhaps waiting for the Fascist All Highest to move his residence to Doorn or some other place.

Masculine Deportment.

Providence Journal: Deportment, it must be admitted, is not what it used to be. But it is gratifying to note that men have not yet relaxed in manner to the extent of using a toothpick, or shaving or polishing their shoes in the presence of a theater audience or a religious congregation. Even when they realize that their noses may be shiny they refrain from applying any ostentatious remedy. Not that men are any better or any more reverent, but they do seem to have a sort of sixth sense that keeps them from doing certain things while a crowd is looking on.

Southern Republicans.

Richmond Times-Dispatch: President Hoover is said to be finding patronage in the South a difficult problem. There are some drawbacks, then, felt elsewhere in the country, to having an increased number of Republicans down here.

Ho, Hum!

Houston Post-Dispatch: The newspapers of the country have Scar-Face Al Capone's obituary ready and waiting in their various "morgues," and there's a well-defined feeling that it won't be long now.

COOKING SCHOOL ECHOES

good for youngsters

(Mixing time: 10 minutes)

One mother I know realizes that her children need sweets. So she provides home-made confections like these Date Sticks which satisfy the craving for sweets in a wholesome way. As nearly as possible all of the fuss and bother have been kitchen-tested out of Crisco recipes and a satisfaction added—the satisfaction of using a modern shortening which lends its own fresh flavor to the foods made with it.

¾ cup Crisco
1½ cups sugar
1 cup sour milk or buttermilk
½ teaspoon soda
3 cups flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 cup chopped nut meats
1 cup cut dates
powdered sugar

Mix Crisco and sugar well. Add sour milk which has been mixed with soda. Then add flour which has been sifted with salt and baking powder, and fold in nuts and dates. Pour into shallow Criscoed pan and bake 20 minutes in moderate (350° F.) oven. Cut into narrow slices while still warm and roll in powdered sugar. These cookies will take the place of less wholesome sweets for the children.

This recipe has been tested and approved by cooking authorities. You will get best results by using level measurements and the ingredients specified.

Taste Crisco's sweet, fresh flavor

You taste milk. You test eggs. Now, taste Crisco—then any other shortening. Then you'll understand why Crisco's own sweet, fresh flavor so improves the taste of your cakes, pies, hot breads, cookies and fried foods.

ART TEMPERAMENT UPHELD BY COURT

Jetta Goudal, Actress, Is Awarded $31,000 on Broken Contract.

FILM WORLD IS STIRRED

Los Angeles, March 18 (A.P.).—A superior court ruling upholding the right of Jetta Goudal, motion picture actress, to indulge in temperamental outbursts at the expense of the film producing company which employed her, was handed down here last night by Judge Leon Yankwich.

Miss Goudal sued Pathe Studios, Inc., for $90,000 claiming that amount due her for services. The decision, which held that as an "artist" Miss Goudal was not subject to the same rules of obedience as a menial, awarded her $31,000.

The suit resulted from the discharge of Miss Goudal, then under contract to the Cecil B. DeMille productions, which later was absorbed by Pathe, in September, 1927, because "temperamental outbursts constituted a breach of contract by herself."

Motion picture circles today predicted that the decision would place an entirely new light on the relationship of players with their employing producers. It was said that it might result in the upset of the whole contract system and the development of an entirely new type of working agreement between movie employer and "artistic" employe.

Slavish Obedience Unnecessary.

The court held that Miss Goudal's value was not "in her ability to obey slavishly—for the humblest extra can do that—but in her ability to inject the force of her personality, experience and intelligence into the acting."

The decision held that artists are not servants and therefore not subject to the conditions generally existing between master and servant.

During trial of the suit several weeks ago, Miss Goudal herself admitted that she frequently disagreed with her directors in making a picture, but said she was within her rights as an artist.

The defendants countered that her outbursts not only made the filming of pictures difficult, but at times impossible.

Actress Within Her Rights.

In speaking of the actress' work, Judge Yankwich said:

"If she could not have been compelled (by her contract) to perform parts of an inferior character destructive to her artistic reputation, was she not within her rights in objecting to particular scenes, which did not give full scope to her artistic abilities, or in requesting that they be changed so as to show her to her best advantage? We believe she was."

Miss Goudal was being paid a salary of $1,750 a week at the time the contract was broken. Under an option of the contract she was to be paid $2,750 a week during the year of 1928.

Judge Yankwich refused to award Miss Goudal the full amount sued for because she waited until January, 1928, to file her complaint. He explained that it should have become evident to her in 1927, after she was discharged, that the defendant did not intend to call on her for further services and that she was "not diligent" in delaying.

Rosa Ponselle Ill.

San Francisco, March 18 (A.P.).—Rosa Ponselle, opera singer, was confined to her room here today by an attack of grippe. Physicians said her condition was not serious.

AMERICAN TO MAKE COLOMBIAN SURVEY

E. W. James, of U. S. Bureau of Public Roads, Named as Highway Expert.

GIVEN LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Edwin W. James, chief of the division of design of the Bureau of Public Roads, United States Department of Agriculture, has been appointed by the government of Colombia, it was announced yesterday, as a member of a commission which will conduct a study and prepare plans for improvement of the entire system of transportation and communication in that country.

At the request of Dr. Enrique Olaya the Colombian Minister to Washington, Mr. James has been relieved of his duties in the Federal bureau for a period of from three to six months. He plans to sail from New York for Bogota March 21.

The commission will consist of five members, three of whom will be foreign members, selected as expert advisers on highway, railway and waterway transportation. Mr. James, who has been selected as the highway expert, is thoroughly informed in matters of road improvement.

He has served with the Bureau of Public Roads since 1910. He was technical adviser to the American delegation to the International Trade Conference on Automobile Traffic in Paris in 1926 and secretary to the joint board of Federal and State highway officials which planned and arranged the United States highway system. He is the author of a book and numerous papers on highway engineering.

Biddle Cottage Burns; Loss Placed at $8,000

Special to The Washington Post.

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., March 18.—Burning of the Nicholas Biddle heirs' 20-room cottage in the suburbs here this morning, with an $8,000 loss, set fire to the adjoining mountain side and sent a volunteer fire-fighting squad into quick action. High winds aggravated the danger.

Other cottages were caught by flying sparks and several automobiles had holes burned in their tops. No heavy damage other than to the Biddle cottage was done. The cottage had been unoccupied several years. Officials blamed prowlers, probably occupying the house Sunday night, for starting the fire.

9th Person Is Held In Orloff Forgeries

Police Report Is Asked for American and Soviet Embassies.

Berlin, March 18 (A.P.).—Another Russian named Braude was arrested today in connection with the Orloff forgeries bringing the total of those detained up to nine. The police also raided some houses in provincial cities but whether they found anything incriminating was not revealed.

Vladimir Orloff, alleged to be the head of a forgery group, and Chief Aide Sumarokov appeared before an examining magistrate today, the object being to determine whether a bill of indictment should be issued against them for forgery and fraud. The magistrate reserved decision but it is understood that they will most likely be remanded for trial.

The foreign office has asked the police for a provisional report in order that it may inform the American and Soviet embassies on the case since both have manifested a lively interest in its developments.

5 Workmen Die as Vat Of Hot Metal Crashes

Prague, Czechoslovakia, March 18 (A.P.).—Five workmen, including a foreman, of the Witkowitzer Iron Foundry, in Ostrau, were burned to death today through the accidental collapse of a huge crucible of molten steel.

A ton of red hot liquid metal poured over the victims, of whose bodies scarcely a vestige remained when help arrived.

NEW CRISIS REACHED IN ILLNESS OF FOCH

Gradual, Slow Sinking and Weakening of Heart Is Noted.

GEN. WEIGAND IS CALLER

Paris, March 18 (A.P.).—Marshal Ferdinand Foch tonight was at another crisis in his long and apparently hopeless illness. His physicians, in leaving him for a while this evening, said he had had no actual new attack, but that it was a case merely of a gradual slow sinking and weakening of his heart.

One doctor said with intense sadness, "Poor, dear marshal! It would not require much of an attack to put an end to his game battle now."

The heart of the former generalissimo of the allied armies has begun to give out under the coalition of diseases affecting his lungs, kidneys and bladder. The brain which carried the allies to victory remained clear while the body was dying. This morning, in a voice hardly audible, the marshal commanded, "I must see Weigand." Gen. Weigand was his chief of staff during the great war. He appeared at the door half an hour later.

The official announcement was that the general had not seen his old friend and superior, but intimate sources were positive that the general had stood at the bedside for 23 minutes.

The physicians had placed an absolute ban against visitors, and queens, presidents, premiers, marshals and generals had been refused admittance when they came to inquire for the old warrior. The fact that Gen. Wiegand was admitted was interpreted as indicating that the doctors felt the end was near.

A rumor that the marshal had died suddenly reduced to absolute silence today the chamber of deputies, known as the noisiest parliament in the world.

Roofing Makers Fined; Decline to Defend Suit

Chicago, March 18 (A.P.).—Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson today imposed a fine of $5,000 against the Ludowici-Celadon Co., manufacturers of roofing tile, after the company entered a plea of nolo contendere to charges of violation of the Sherman antitrust laws. At the same time the court entered a consent decree restraining the defendants from further violations of the law.

Attorneys for the company said the concern felt no consciousness of guilt, but agreed to the fine and the decree rather than enter into extensive litigation. The case was disposed of speedily, the original information having been filed less than a week ago.

For Colds—

How many people you know end their colds with Bayer Aspirin? And how often you've heard of its prompt relief of sore throat or tonsilitis. No wonder millions take it for colds, neuralgia, rheumatism; and the aches and pains that go with them. The wonder is that anyone still worries through a winter without these tablets! They relieve quickly, yet have no effect whatever on the heart. Friends have told you Bayer Aspirin is marvelous; doctors have declared it harmless. Every druggist has it, with proven directions. CAPONE TO SUBMIT TO QUIZ IN CHICAGO

Gang Chief, However, Demands Immunity in Slaying of Moran Men.

DENIES HE HAS THEORY

Chicago, March 18 (A.P.).—Al Capone today served notice through his attorneys that he was ready to testify Wednesday before the Federal grand jury investigating liquor law violations in the Chicago area—provided his constitutional rights of immunity from prosecution are upheld.

The immunity ultimatum was made to local police who desire to question him regarding the massacre of seven Moran gangsters.

Capone, his attorneys pointed out, was coming here under a Federal summons and the Government would be asked to protect him from police molestation during his stay and while he is en route back to Florida. Tonight he was variously reported as still in Florida or en route from Miami, where he has been wintering, to Chicago's less mild climate.

Federal authorities and police did not indicate whether they had accepted any or all of the conditions, but Capone's attorneys said they were prepared to go into court and get injunctions, restraining orders and other legal papers to back their demands if there was trouble.

The police are anxious to learn Capone's views on the St. Valentine's day gang massacre and point out that about every one else has had a theory as to the slayers and perhaps Capone can supply a new one. Al's attorneys, William F. Waugh and Benjamin Epstein, have indicated clearly that their client did not want to theorize on the shooting of the Moran gangsters.

The Government wants to ask Capone, among other things, why his name is mentioned every time there is a liquor raid. To this Capone already has an answer prepared. He contends that through unwelcome newspaper publicity his name has become so well known that the "little fellows" think it would help to intimidate the raiders if they mentioned his name as owner of the raided place.

Advertising Theme Of College Debate

"Birth Control" Is Abandoned as Subject When Brown Men Object.

Middletown, Conn., March 18 (N.Y. W.N.S.).—Debaters of Harvard, Brown and Wesleyan will deplore and defend modern advertising, not birth control, it was announced here today. The substitution, however, almost caused cancellation of the three-cornered debate.

The Harvard team is said to have declared that it would discuss birth control and nothing else. How the Brown team felt is not known, but the Brown officials turned their slightly scandalized thumbs down—vehemently. For a time there was a deadlock. Then Harvard relented, and it was arranged for the teams of the three colleges to discuss: "Resolved, That it is deplorable the large part advertising plays in modern civilization."

The debate occurs March 22, with Harvard here, Wesleyan at Providence and Brown at Cambridge.

House Votes Teaching Of Alcohol's Effect

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

THE NEW NEIGHBORS.

(Ex-President and Mrs. Coolidge have returned to their old home in one-half of a double house in placid unexcitable Northampton. The occupants of the other side are a Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Plummer.)

(Scene—The Plummer living room in the early evening.)

Mr. Plummer (over his paper)—Seems good to have somebody in the other half, doesn't it?

Mrs. Plummer—Yes, and they act like very good neighbors, so far.

Mr. Plummer—What's their name? Did you hear?

Mrs. Plummer—I heard down at the butcher's this morning, but I just can't recall. . . Woolridge, I think.

Mr. Plummer—Woolbridge? Woolbridge? Don't think I know 'em.

Mrs. Plummer—Maybe it was Coldbridge. . . It was something like that, anyway. . . . I'm sure there was a 'ridge' in it. . . Oh. . . . I remember now . . . It was Coolidge . . . George W. Coolidge!

Mr. Plummer—Seems to me I used to know a man named Coolidge around here, but it wasn't George W. He went away about eight years ago. What was his first name? . . . Casper, wasn't it? . . . Or Alvin. . . No. . . Calvin. That was it . . . Calvin Coolidge! He left town and made quite a name for himself in some Southern city. Richmond or Baltimore.

Mrs. Plummer—You don't mean the Calvin Coolidge that went away to Washington, do you?

Mr. Plummer—Was it Washington? I guess you're right, at that. Yes, he left Northampton to take a job in Washington, D. C. Pretty big job, too, as I recall it.

Mrs. Plummer—President or something or other, wasn't it?

Mr. Plummer—President of the United States, if I'm not mistaken. I wonder if he and the new neighbor could be the same.

Mrs. Plummer—He's a very quiet person. I never hear a sound.

Mr. Plummer—That's the one, all right!

Mrs. Plummer—Th President of the United States wouldn't be coming back to live in a little house like this, would he?

Mr. Plummer—Well, you never can tell. He may have lost the job suddenly and had to economize. These Presidents don't make so much money and the job's uncertain. They never know when they're going to be turned out.

(The door on the other side of the porch slams and Mr. Coolidge steps out on the way to a corner store.)

Mrs Plummer—There he is now!

Mr. Plummer—Why that's Calvin, all right, and he looks just like he did when he left town to seek his fortune! Well! Well!

Mrs. Plummer—What do you suppose he's doing back here?

Mr. Plummer—Probably things didn't pan out in the big city the way he expected.

YOU NEVER CAN TELL.

Herman Thomas wants to know whether anything will be done toward barring Mr. Coolidge from the Presidency in 1932 under the player-writer rule.

EXPLAINING IT.

The insurgent Mexican generals, surrendering, find themselves in a tight place. About all they say is that it was a terrible mistake. Now, if they had good lawyers they would blame it on glandular trouble and make a plea. "I picked up the army and it just went off in the struggle."

It begins to look as if the Mexican rebels were running the wrong way with the ball.

Fred Wesson reports that when he left Miami he could get all the rooms he wanted in any hotel by stopping in front and letting his auto backfire.

KAISER AND TIRPITZ RENEW FRIENDSHIP

Exiled Ruler Felicitates 80-Year-Old Former Naval Chieftain.

HONORED BY HINDENBURG

Munich, Germany, March 18 (United Press).—For the first time since they quarreled in 1916, the exiled former Kaiser Wilhelm and Grand Admiral von Tirpitz, father of the deadly submarine warfare waged by Germany during the World War, are to be reconciled tomorrow.

On the occasion of his eightieth birthday anniversary Von Tirpitz will receive a telegram from Wilhelm, exiled in Doorn, Holland, recognizing the old sea lord's service to the Fatherland.

Tonight elaborate festivities marking observance of Von Tirpitz's birthday began at Feldafing, his country seat near Munich. They will culminate in even more colorful celebrations tomorrow.

Among hundreds of congratulatory messages pouring into Feldafing tonight was a personal letter of felicitation from President Paul von Hindenburg.

Dressed in Mufti, Von Tirpitz appeared tonight on the terrace of his home, facing the Alps Mountains, while hundreds of former officers, soldiers, sailors, former members of the imperial army and navy, members of the Fatherland League, students from Munich University, firemen, villagers and gymnasts gathered to pay him homage.

Already Feldafing is filled to overflowing. Hundreds of well-wishers of Von Tirpitz are expected to reach Munich aboard special trains from Berlin tomorrow.

Hundreds of gifts from all parts of Germany have accompanied the letters and telegrams coming to Feldafing. With the assistance of Germans in the United States and South America, friends of the former sea lord today established the Von Tirpitz Foundation for the aid of naval officers.

BEHIND THE SCREENS

With NELSON B. BELL

On the outside chance that there may be some among you who will remember the "Saturday Nighters," a broadcasting unit closely identified with the motion picture theaters and one that flourished three or four years ago, I propose to divulge the latest word from two of the most popular artistes ever concerned in what was once one of WRC's most consistent features.

Probably the most widespread and immediate fame fell to the lot of Kate Smith, whose likeness recently appeared on the decoratiy front page of the "Cleveland Town Topics," where she was playing at the time. Following the Cleveland engagement, Kate appeare in turn at the Palace Theater in Dayton, Ohio; the Rialto in Louisville, Ky., and the Davis in Pittsburgh, after which came Rochester and Syracuse, N. Y. Dominant billing was accorded the Washington star in all of these stands, clippings enclosed with the cordial note disclose. The Eastern trend of the later bookings may be taken to mean that Eddie Dowling's next show is getting under way and that Kate will soon be called to rehearsals to duplicate her triumph in "Honeymoon Lane."

The other of the vocal artistes is the brilliant soprano who lent her talents to the aerial unit whenever she was on this side, from her studies in Paris and Cannes—Mary Lucia Fish Dyer. Mrs. Dyer only recently acquired that added bit of nomenclature by marrying a young American in London.

Somewhat more addicted to embonpoint than when here last, Mrs. Dyer dropped into Washington for the inauguration, departed briefly for New York and then returned to the Capital for a hurried visit with friends. One more year of intensive study abroad and this talented young native of Eau Claire, Wis., who has lived more than half her life on European soil, will take up her permanent residence in America, probably making her home in Chicago.

I pause for Mr. Daly to check up the recent movements of Ann Suter!

M. J. Cullen, managing director of the Loew Theaters in this city, dispatches a special emissary to the photodramatic desks with a communication which, it seems to me, falls something short of fulfilling its intended mission. Its purpose is primarily to make clear that by virtue of a new policy put in operation for the first time this week the Palace will offer its bills in such manner that a patron, no matter at what hour he may enter the theater, may witness the complete program without being forced to view any single program unit twice. By precisely what device, I am not informed.

To help accomplish this wholly desirable end, doors will be thrown open to the public daily, except Sunday, at 10:45 a. m., and on Saturday five de luxe performances will be given instead of four as heretofore. This, as I understand it, means that in future the early afternoon and supper shows will take on new importance to those accustomed to attend these "off hour" performances.

As far as I personally am concerned I wouldn't mind particularly if I happened to be confronted with the necessiey of watching Lupe Velez maul poor Franklin Pangborn a second time in "Lady of the Pavements." A very delightful melee if you ask me!

Heretofore I have held to the belief that Rudy Wiedoeft, on the sax, and Cliff Edwards, with his uke, were top in their respective fields, but now I am beginning to waver. Knowing Rudy as well as I do, I am confident that he would be glad to move over and make room for Boyd Senter beside him on the heights, and "Ukulele Ike" would be crazy not to admit that Billy ("Uke") Carpenter is his equal in all essential particulars.

Both are knocking the customers into the aisles in the "Bubbling Over" revue at the Palace, and when they take in Wesley Eddy to smash out "I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby," I mean the place gets hot.

It isn't that I do not like Bert Frohman, the new master of ceremonies at the Fox, but merely that it is my view—which seems to be substantiated by the attitude of numerous others—that a lengthy autobiography does not in the ordinary sense come under the heading of entertainment.

Everything but that, I like—especially Mr. Frohman's singing this week of "That's the Sunny South." He puts lots of stuff in it and the crowd eats it up. That ought to be the answer right there.

There is a big week in the offing. With "Broadway Melody," "Hearts in Dixie" and "The Divine Lady" all jockeying for the break the same week, the casual fan ought to get his money's worth no matter where he goes. That is if he can manage to get in wherever he does.

And there are other rumors afloat that I am not at liberty to disclose at this time. But I can go so far as to say that if they eventuate, as now seems likely, they will tear F street wide open. Now, don't ask me.

By the way, it seems to be a much tougher job to get those stands down than it was to put them up.

$1,200,000 SUIT WON ON CAPITAL BUILDING

Surety Firms Lose Action of Bond Holders on Washington Structure.

4 COMPANIES MUST PAY

Philadelphia, March 18 (A.P.).—A committee of Philadelphia bankers, representing holders of first mortgage bonds of the Washington Building in Washington, D. C., today obtained a judgement of $1,200,000 with interest, under a decision by Judge Thomas D. Finletter in common pleas court. The defendants were the Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co., Metropoliton Casualty Insurance Co., of New York and the Maryland Casualty Co., surety for the bonds issued to finance the building.

Suit was brought in the name of the National Shawmut Bank of Boston, as trustee for the Washington Central Trust, an association organized to erect the building. Default was made on the interest of the first mortgage bonds on December 1, 1827.

The basis of the action was that the surety companies, by an unusual surety bond, guaranteed not merely completion of the building, but until it was completed and paid for, free of all liens, the owners would perform all the covenants of the mortgage.

Judge Finletter held that the surety companies under the circumstances, were bound to make good immediately the default in the principal and interest under the mortgage, and that the bond holders need not just sell the building and establish a deficit.

District Public Schools Teach 73,097 Students

A total of 73,097 students are enrolled in the public schools in Washington, according to figures made public yesterday by Robert M. Haycock, first assistant superintendent of schools. The 1929 enrollment represents an increase of 1,353 students over that for the same period last year.

Of the total number of students enrolled, 57,910 are in the elementary schools. At this time last year, 57,188 students were in attendance in the elementary grades. In the high schools, 14,792 students are enrolled as compared with 14,015 at the same time last year. Enrolment in the normal schools dropped from 541 in March last year to 395 at the present time.

MOTHER OR OFFSPRING

Language Expands and Develops Minds as It Conveys Ideas

Do you know that the use of language is not limited to the mere communication of ideas? An equally important function is that of the instrumentality of thought. It is not only its vehicle, but its means of expansion. Hardly any of our intellectual operations could be carried on without the agency of words.

Then language is not only the offspring of thought, but it is also its mother. In every process of reasoning words are an essential element. By means of them we fashion and embody our ideas.

The Dictionary is therefore a necessity. It should be at your elbow at all times, whether at your place of business, in your home, or at school or shop. The New World Dictionary is within reach of every reader, as explained in the coupon printed elsewhere in this issue.

IN THE PLAY HOUSE

By JOHN J. DALY

The Brandon-Barrett Corporation present "The Devil's Mistress," a modern play by H. H. Harper. Staged by Joseph Graham.

THE CAST:

Gwyndolyn Barrett	Marcia Byron
Le Marquis de Bocage	Robert C. Fischer
Dr. Robert Brandon	Brandon Tynan
Miss Daly	Louise Quinn
Miss Hurley	Peggy Shannon
Orderly	Robert Sinclair
Miss Anderson	Hilda Howe
Jerry Harkness	Lee Patrick
Dr. William Billings	Dodson L. Mitchell
Susan	May Davenport
Dr. Francois Planchet	Jules Epailly
Ledoux	Jean Del Val

Something really should be done about "The Devil's Mistress," the new play by H. H. Harper, which came to the boards of the Belasco Theater last night—on its way either to Hoboken or Broadway.

It is one of those enigmas of drama, neither fish, flesh nor fowl—that is, in its present state. As the work now stands it could be sent on its rollicking way as a comedy, or else turned into stark tragedy. Failing either of these, there is always hope of a melodramatic twist to the works, so that all these efforts may not be in vain; provided, ever and always, that all concerned are not hopelessly lost in a morass of thought, do not throw up their hands and quit.

"The Devil's Mistress," to cut short all suspense, has a Parisian background, which means a lover and his turtle dove. In this case the lady is the unhappy wife of le Marquis de Mocage, a "dhir-thee vil-lun" who claims she married him for his title, a deed done in order to enhance her career on the operatic stage. Yessir, le madame is a singer. Into her arms falls Dr. Brandon, a millionaire physician and surgeon from Tarrytown-on-the-Hudson, in the good old U. S. A.

The doctors up in that part of New York State will consider this man Brandon a reflection on the profession, for coming from the Empire State, he should have known that the lady was married. Certainly she traded on her title. Alas, the doc went into this liaison with his eyes blinded. So he had to shoot the husband upon that worthy's return to the villa at Passy-Sur-Seine. At least, the doctor thought he shot le marquis. As a matter of fact, the lady herself, in person winged a bullet into the old villun's heart as the ferocious Frenchman went charging at the American with a rapier. Of ocurse, the doctor shot at the chargee—or is it the chargor? At the same time, it was the bullet from le femme's revolver that floored the old warhorse, in the open season for chargers. This salient point, in the play is not divulged until the last act, so that the doctor comes back to America, and his true love, under the belief that he is a murderer.

With this trio operating an eternal triangle—the singer, the doctor and le marquis—"The Devil's Mistress" turns its first act entirely over to tragedy. Imagine the surprise, then, when the second act starts off as one of the finest comedies seen in the Southland these many moons. The scene is in the celebrated clinic of Dr. Billings, in a suburb of New York. Dr. Billings is the amiable uncle of Dr. Brandon, the young blade who had his fling on the Parisian boulevards, wiz zee madame.

The curtain goes up on as fine and fancy a collection of nurses as any hospital has bragged about since the Armistice. The head nurse is Miss Daly, and while she is no relation to this wing of the family, she does manage to keep things going, including the play. The undernurses come to her desk from time to time and report on the condition of the patients, always with that flaire for hospital humor so prevalent around the desks of head nurses. Finally, Dr. Billing's niece, the gal who loves the American roue, Dr. Brandon, brings in an old Irish woman suffering from ear trouble. She is about to have a mastoid.

Dr. Billing gets on the job, puts the old Irish woman through the usual interrogations, preliminary to an operation, and the fun goes on and on, until the comedienne playing this part, May Davenport, is ushered amid great applause of the stage. A mighty fine vaudeville touch Miss Davenport gives to this, to be sure, but for why? A full fifteen minutes are devoted to comedy relief that but despoils the tragedy, breaks up the continuity and plays havoc with "The Devil's Mistress." Perhaps that is as it should be, for when the final analysis comes to pass there is not much to this work, as it now stands. God help the play doctors in a case like this. Still, an operation might save "The Devil's Mistress."

Brandon Tynan, seen here often in more becoming roles, has the time of his life playing a role totally unsuited to his temperament, his talents or even his Tyronean trade-mark, a natural Irish brogue and demeanor. He is the American physician who falls in Paris. There are others in the cast similarly lost, with Miss Marcia Byron struggling gallantly to make of the villainous lady a convincing sinner, and Miss Lee Patrick forced to listen to an abhorrent confession from the lips of her sweetheart.

Some time during the week the producers, the author and the cast ought to get together and decide what should be made of "The Devil's Mistress," a comedy, a tragedy or just an old-time rip-snorting melodrama. If the latter, then it should be taken, under a new title, right over to Hoboken.

The National Theater Players revert to rollicking comedy this week after their successful excursion into the realms of more serious drama with "Madame X" last week. James Montgomery's laugh-provoking "Nothnig But the Truth" is Manager S. E. Cochran's selection for the current week and the opening last night demonstrated that he selected wisely.

The manager of a repertoire company has many hurdles to clear and not the least of these is that of finding productions fitted to the members of his cast. He must fit the play to the man—or woman—so to speak, instead of being in the more fortunate position of the producers who hopes for a long run with one play and selects his players for that play. So far during the current season the National Players have not offered a more fortunate harmony of play and players than in the current production.

As every theatergoer must know after these many years, "Nothing But the Truth" is built around that supernumerary commandment that "Thou shalt lie if the truth would be impolite;" the principle that a reasonable amount of prevarication is the lubricant which is as necessary to smoothness in social relationships as is oil in the operation of an automobile. The hero-victim of the piece is a bright young man who undertakes to tell nothing but the truth for 24 hours in order to win a bet which is necessary to the success of his current love affair. He wins the bet and the girl—but nearly disrupts everyth. g else in the process. Just how he does it is worth seeing, but would be spoiled by the telling.

Wilfred Lytell in the role of the modern George Washington is more happily cast than has been his fortune in some of his recent productions. The same may be said of Charles Hampden as the father of the girl and, incidentally, one who foses the bet. Indeed, this role suited Hampden to perfection. Although restricted to a minor role, Arthur Rhodes contributed one of the choice bits of the play as the society bishop who 'knows nothing about business" so thoroughly that the buccaneers of Wall street pay unwilling tribute whenever the episcopal palm is extended.

In the feminine roles, Mary Newton, as the girl about whom the action revolves, and Adelaide Hubbard, as the girl's mother, give their usual excellent performances. Miss Newton, incidentally, has been called upon to fill parts ranging from the title role in "Madame X" to that of simpering ingenues. Her technique is good in all of them but she should not be called upon for an ingenue role for the same reason that Ann Pennington should not be substituted for Charlotte Greenwood.

Arraigned in Police Court yesterday on a charge of assaulting Ray Hall, colored, with a table leg, Stewart Marshall, colored, pleaded irresponsibility for his act because he had been drinking. Judge Isaac R. Hitt decided the defendant had had more than a few drinks and continued the case pending treatment of the man at Gallinger Hospital.

NEW MISSIONARIES ASSIGNED TO POSTS

Eleven Consecrated, With 13 Deaconnesses, at Closing Sessions Here.

DUKE EDUCATOR HEARD

The nineteenth annual session of the Woman's Missionary Council, which opened in Washington at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church South, last Wednesday, ended last night with the consecration of eleven new foreign missionaries and thirteen deaconesses.

The missionaries and deaconesses were consecrated and commissioned by Bishop W. B. Beauchamp, of Atlanta, Ga., after a solemn service.

The new missionaries are: Lucy A. Wade, of Little Rock, Ark., to Brazil; Gertrude Grace Clapp, of north Alabama, to Brazil; Hortense Murray, of Little Rock, to Africa; Eva Dorothy Rees, of Kentucky, to Africa; Elizabeth Steagall Dent, of north Georgia, to China; Jean Frances Craig, of Virginia, to China; Ola E. Callahan, of western North Carolina, to Mexico; Priscilla Walker, of north Mississippi, to Mexico; Jewel Golda Burns, of Texas, to Mexico; Elizabeth Earnest, of Texas, to Cuba, and Leila Bagley, of north Alabama, to Japan.

The deaconesses are: Emma Burris, Louisiana; Una Smith, southwest Missouri; Inez Martin, St. Louis; Blanche Harriett White, St. Louis; Lillie V. Wood, North Carolina; Cora Lee Glenn, North Carolina; Margaret E. Van Lehr, Alabama; Louise Hill Smith, Louisville; Jessie Mae Byers, north Texas; Ruth Myrta Carryer, Missouri; Mattie Lou Neal, Texas; Alice Clotte Riley and Lillian Addison, Texas.

At the closing business meeting of the session, pledges amounting to $1,119,000 for missionary work both at home and abroad were announced as subscribed. This amount is $100,000 more than the sum pledged last year. A number of additional appropriations were made on behalf of institutions in the United States.

Dr. Elbert Russell, of Duke University preached the final sermon of the six-day session. He asserted that modern youth has been influenced to discard the more fundamental laws of morality by an unwarranted opposition on the part of an older generation to bobbed hair, short skirts and other trivial foibles of a jazz age. He declared that the older generation is to blame for confusing youth by placing minor infractions in the same class with sins.

The twentieth session of the council will be held in Texas next year. More than 300 delegates attended the session in Washington.

Causes of Bladder Inflammation

Inflammation of the bladder is usually due to some trouble outside of the bladder. Quite often the cause can be traced to improper functioning of the kidneys which has allowed irritating poisons to remain in the urine. Mountain Valley Mineral Water from Hot Springs, Ark., is a valuable aid in treating and preventing bladder inflammation, because it tends to soothe the inflamed cells and to neutralize the acids which are the cause of irritation. And also because it stimulates and assists the kidneys to do their work of elimination properly. It has brought relief to thousands. "Ask your doctor." Phone us for a case today. We deliver.

The Children

By Edith Wharton

A sparkling serial story by one of America's foremost novelists at the gleaming heights of her power.

SHE pondered on this for a few moments without answering. Then, with one of her sudden changes of tone: "Martin," she broke out impetuously, "do you suppose she was right, after all—I mean the princess—about our being so dreadfully behind the times? Do you suppose, if we did all the things she suggested; if we got new teachers and new books, and somebody for Bun's gymnastics, it would make any difference—do you think it would?" Every line of her face, from lifted eyebrows to parted lips, was a passionate demand for his assent. "After all, you know—perhaps she was right about some things; that stupid old book of Scopy's, for instance. Of course, we all know poor darling Scopy's a back number. And about Bun's gymnastics, too. Do you suppose if we took a villa at Meran we could afford to fit up a room like the one she described and get an instructor—didn't she call him an instructor? And then there's fencing and riding—I dare say she was right about that, too! But after all——" She paused, and her eyes looked as the rain did when the sun was trying to break through it. "After all, Martin," she began again, "the main thing is that the children are so well, isn't it? Look at our record—see what the summer has done! You wouldn't know Terry, would you, if you were to see him now for the first time after meeting us on the boat at Algiers? And Chip—isn't Chip a miracle? Every one stops Nanny in the street to admire him, and they always think he must be 3 years old. He was just beginning to walk alone when he came here—now he runs like a hare! Nanny gets worn out chasing him. And the tricks he's learnt to do! He can imitate everybody; I believe he's going to be a movie star. Have you seen him do the lion, with Bun as lion tamer? Or the old man at the market, all doubled up with sciatica, who leans on a stick and holds one hand behind his back? But it's a wonder! Oh, Martin, wait, and I'll fetch him down now to do the old man for you—shall I?"

Once again her grown up cares had vanished in the childish pride of recounting Chip's achievements. Would it always be like this, Boyne wondered, or would life gradually close the gates of the fairyland which was still so close to her? He would have given most of his chances of happiness to help her keep open that communication with her childhood. And what if he were the one being who could do it? The question wound itself through his thoughts like a persuasive hand insinuating itself into his. This heart-break of separation that was upon her—what if he alone had the power to ease it? He stood looking down at her perplexedly.

"Judy—Chip's a great man, and I'd love to see him do the old gentleman with the sciatica. But first . . ."

"Yes—first?" she palpitated. But under his gaze her radiance gradually faded, and her lips began to tremble a little. "Ah, then you don't think . . . there's any hope for us?"

"I think you've got to go to Paris and see your mother."

"And take Chip? I'll never take Chip! I won't!"

"But listen, dear——" He sat down and drew her to the sofa beside him, speaking as he might have to a child on a holiday who was fighting the summons back to school.

"Listen, Judy. We've done our best; we all have. But the children are not yours or mine. They belong to their parents, after all." How dry and flat his phrases sounded, compared with the words he longed to say to her!

She drew back into the corner of the sofa. "That Buondelmonte woman's got at you—she's talked you over! I knew she would." She was grown up again now, measuring him with angry suspicious eyes and flinging out her accusations in her mother's shrillest voice.

"Why, child, what nonsense! You said just now that perhaps the princess was right . . ."

"I never did! I said, perhaps we ought to get a new Cyclopedia for Scopy, and have Bun taught scientific gymnastics; and now you say . . ."

"I say that fate's too much for us. It didn't need the Princess Buondelmonte to teach me that."

She made no answer, and they sat in silence in their respective corners of the sofa, each gazing desperately into a future of which nothing could be divined except that it was the end of their hopes. Suddenly Judith flung herself face down against the knobby cushions and broke into weeping. Boyne, for a few minutes, remained numb and helpless; then he moved closer, and bending over drew her into his arms. She seemed hardly aware of his nearness; she simply went on crying, with hard uneven sobs, pressing her face against his shoulder as if it were the sofa cushion. He held her in silence, not venturing to speak, or even to brush back her tumbled hair, while he pictured, with the acuity of his older and less articulate grief, what must be passing before her as the fibers of her heart were torn away. "It's too cruel—it's too beastly cruel," he thought, wincing at the ugly details which must enter into her vision of the future, details he could only guess at, while she saw them with all the precision of experience. Yes, it was too cruel; but what could he or she do? He continued to hold her in silence, listening to the beat of the rain on the half-open window, and smelling the cold graveyard smell of the autumn earth, while her sobs ran through him in shocks of anguish.

Gradually her weeping subsided, and Boyne took courage to lift his hand and pass it once or twice over her hair. She lay in his hold as quietly as a frightened bird, and presently he bent his head and whispered: "Judy——" Why not? he thought; his heart was beating with reckless bounds. He was free, after all, if it came to that; free to chuck his life away on any madness; and madness this was, he knew. Well, he'd had enough of reason for the rest of his days; and a man is only as old as he feels. . . . He bent so close that his lips brushed her ear. "Judy, darling, listen. . . . Perhaps, after all there's a way——"

YOUR BOY and YOUR GIRL

By ARTHUR DEAN, SC.D., The Parent Counselor

Who Wins?

WHERE does the quiet girl come in? Does she ever go anywhere? Is it only the gay and boisterous type that attracts the boys? Are we worrying needlessly over the girls who are supposed to care for nothing but parties, dances, rides and gayety?

From my correspondence I know that quiet girls are sometimes worried for fear that they will miss out at the platinum ring age because they are not now the life of the party.

But here's a tale about the three young men admired the world over because they are exceptional young men. Recently one of them has slipped on the ring and two more are tremendously interested in circular jewelry.

Which three? Oh, you must know! One is a stalwart and handsome fellow, a retired and undefeated champion of a popular and rather lucrative sport sometimes called the manly art of mauling.

The next? Oh, he's that young chap who graduated from college and started to work in a railroad office. His dad, you remember, had a very important position in Washington, D. C., prior to March 4.

And the third? Well, two years ago hardly any one had ever heard of him. Then, like a young Lochinvar, he came riding wings out of the West, calmly announced that he was going to fly to Paris. He then proceeded to do it, to the joy and admiration of the world.

A year ago all three of these young men were bachelors—and desirable ones, too; clean, accomplished and attractive. What sort of girls did they choose?

The first to make his selection public was the retired champion. He chose—if the man does the choosing—a wholesome, quiet and modest girl who was fond of outdoor activities and noted for her intellect and culture. She could write poetry and she knew more about literature than he did.

Next the young railroad clerk announced his choice. He took a college graduate, a girl with a splendid home background and a sensible and genuine young lady. With every opportunity to shine simply as a society flapper, she turned her thoughts to music and the out-of-doors.

And now the young aviator has told us his choice. Here again it's a girl of high intellectual attainments; a college graduate who distinguished herself not by being a prom trotter but by winning literary prizes; a girl as quiet, modest, retiring and self-effacing as the young aviator himself. These qualities can not make a noise and so we don't hear them shout like we do the other sort.

A life-of-the-party girl is only the life of her kind of a party. These three girls of today's tale were the life of the party, too. Only they chose their party.

Take courage, quiet ones. Talent, culture and studiousness still count.

OUR CONVERSATION CORNER.
Old Fools.

My daughter just 12 years old is attractive and fascinating to men. The attention from older men is getting to be a serious problem. It is disgusting. Am I helpless? MOTHER.

Answer—It surely is disgusting. Perhaps next to early childhood days, and even babyhood, there is nothing more wonderful and beautiful than the sudden unfolding of the human spirit at that period when "our little girl" is no longer "our little girl," when she is between the child that was and the woman that is to be.

Share Honor in the New Ensemble

In fact, a favored way of doing this is by combining tweed with silk—as does the Carolyn Mode at the left. The tweed coat is lined with the flat crepe that makes the two-piece dress. (Isn't it nice to think of creating other ensembles by using this coat with your other silk dresses?) In tan only. For Misses.

$39.50

Another new Carolyn Mode (at right) is entirely of flat crepe, with the two-piece dress, sleeveless, a style feature that is rapidly gaining more favor. The two tone treatment it exploits is also important. In blue, navy, or black with egg shell. For Misses.

DEAREST GENEVIEVE:

You wrote me that you had at last found a charming suit and hat in one of the shops I had told you of. I am delighted to hear it for the same mail brought me a note from a woman who said she had gone in one of my pet shops and had been treated exactly as though she were an imposter. She said the saleswoman in charge was so indifferent and nonchalant and so entirely casual, that she could neither find out what was "being worn" nor whether the said shop had it. This woman was ready to pay any price within reason, but says that she was so annoyed by the lack of interest and attention that she decided to go elsewhere after all.

Had You Visited Dunthorne's Galleries

—yesterday at tea-time, you would have seen many of your friends. Great numbers of people visited the exhibit of early maps by Mildred Burrage which opened there yesterday.

Every one explained about the illuminated gold and silver relief maps, copies of very old maps of Virginia, and various other places. They are curious and amusing besides being highly decorative.

You could study one of them for hours, the strange sea monsters, the crudely done scenes of the career of Capt. John Smith, with the figures out of drawing and all that. In one a large Pocahantas, supposed to be in the foreground, rushes to the aid of a dimunitive captain about to be burned at an immense roaring fire.

You will like to see the Pennell etchings, too, which are shown this week in an extensive collection. Mr. Dunthorne is very proud of the fact that he has been able to secure several which he has never had before, Washington scenes; the Capitol from the arched entrance to the Union Station, and several others.

Although you may not get any tea today, it will pay you to go in and see the etchings and the maps, and all the other fascinating things in Gordon Dunthorne's, 1726 Conn. Ave.

Green and Orange Velvet Bunnies

—not quite true to life, but most amusing and colorful, are in the displays at Mr. Foster's Remembrance Shop, 1023 Conn. Ave. These will suggest Easter gifts or favors. There are downy chicks, too, which I think are walking chicks, I am not sure. While you are looking, be sure to see the striped tabby cats with bells around their necks, quite realistic.

The handsomest addition to the displays in Mr. Foster's which I have seen for some time, are the modernistic lamps which have just arrived. One is a bronze group of figurines of Diana and a pair of hounds, posed before a screen of clouded glass, the light showing through. This is highly decorative. Another lamp is poised above a green bronze head and shoulder of a woman, with face upturned to the light and eyes closed. There is a pale green shade for this. It is more appealing than it sounds.

I almost forgot to tell you about the Ceramic rabbits from Austria, which are so cunning, made in several life-like positions, priced at $2.25. Other things you will like are the bone jewelry in barbaric designs, and a new set of waste-basket and magazine rack made of decorated cork.

Vincent di Francis Makes Suits

—and sport things and spring coats. Di Francis is known for his fine tailoring and has models ready-made for you to see. His shop is up one flight at 1636 Conn. Ave.

I saw a tan sport coat there yesterday which he had made for a woman I know which has all the points a coat should have this spring if it needs to be smart all day long.

Di Francis' prices are moderate, his workmanship is dependable, and being an artistic Italian, he has a sense of line and color and can suggest to you what would be nice for you to have. This is a good place to know about.

Easter Thoughts of Loving Kindness

—may be expressed for our friends and families in so many ways, but in no happier manner than with the gift of a photograph —especially if the photograph is made at Underwood & Underwood's.

If you have had your sittings at this famous studio you might like to reorder at this time. It is much nicer, however, to have new poses, for even your coiffure changes in a few weeks' time, and you want your dear ones to see you exactly as you look right at this minute.

It is quite possible, too, that you have by this writing a new spring costume which would do well to be immortalized. There is a pride in giving a picture which is entirely up to date in every way.

The beauty and artistry of Underwood & Underwood finish and lighting can, of course, be the result of nothing less than the combined efforts of the skilled and talented staff which make the picture. Underwood & Underwood's is at 1330 Connecticut Ave. Easter is March 31st. You still have time to have a picture made for this occasion.

Pasternak Tailoring Is Unexcelled

—in any season. This spring there is a great demand for tailored ensembles and "dressmaker" costumes and they are quite different from anything we have had previously.

New weaves developed in hip length coat-suits with severe blouses of string colored crepe or satin are especially wearable for Washington. Hats and furs are found in a superb assortment in Pasternak's, 1219 Connecticut avenue.

This shop is one of the few places here where you can have suits made to your order. Whether you find what you want in the regular displays, or whether you have something made you will be conscious of being superlatively dressed in anything which comes from this smart shop. Prices are moderate, too.

Every One Is Talking About

—the new addition to Wardman Park Hotel which has just opened. It seems only yesterday that the first work started on removing the lovely Wardman residence which occupied that corner, and now, as though by magic, this immense new wing is all finished and ready for occupancy.

To tell you the truth, I have not been in it as yet, but venture to say that it surpasses in beauty the original part of the hotel, which represents the ultimate in comforts and conveniences.

As I have so often said, Wardman Park Hotel is unique in every way. It is within five minutes of the business section and yet comprises all the delightful features of a resort hotel or a large country club. Tennis, riding, swimming, dining and dancing in the happiest imaginable environment have made Wardman Park Hotel the favorite year-round residence of leading men and women from all over the country.

Visitors in Washington for brief periods like it too, and it is possible to secure reservations for short times as well as longer.

Remember the Red Letter Testaments

—bound in polished olive wood at the shop of the Near East Industries and American Friends of Greece, 1334 Conn. Ave. They are from Jerusalem and will make wonderful gifts for Easter.

There is no end to the rare silks and embroidered linens to be found in this wonderful shop. It is like stepping into a bazaar in Athens to cross its threshold. There are any number of little things, doilies and purses and lacquered wooden boxes for very small sums. Of course, if you want to buy an Oriental rug, that will cost money.

Betty Hanna Shows Suits

—as a more important feature than usual in her collections. Every one is delighted with the little coat-suits with their own blouses, copies of Paris creations, which are exhibited now in the shop of Betty Hanna, 1613 Conn. Ave.

A Suzanne Talbot tweed in white beige shows a marked "dress-maker" touch, ties with a bow on one shoulder and has a blouse of heavy off-white crepe.

You will approve of a tobacco brown kashmirana coat and skirt with a light silk blouse inset with silk the same color as the suit. I can not over-emphasize the excellence of the workmanship in these suits. This type of suit is priced much higher as a rule.

Up One Flight To Buy Frocks

—is quite worth while when you find a place like Herren's, 1735 Connecticut Ave. The school girls have discovered Herron's and are taking great delight in the attractive little models at small prices which this shop happily shows.

You might like to know some of the designs you may see there today. There is a light blue crepe with the top and sleeves embroidered all over in blue and white for only $25. You will like a navy and tan checked silk sleeveless frock with its own coat of plain blue crepe, outlined in piping of the check, at $16.50.

There are some adorable twin prints in chiffon frocks and crepe coats for only $16.50 each. The colors are simply joyous!

Vansley's Have a Coral Window

—or at least they did have yesterday. A coral chiffon frock for informal evening wear, a coral jersey sleeveless frock, and pieces of coral jewelry displayed on a crystal mirror.

This shop, Vansley's, 1738 Conn. Ave., is an important shop for you to know about. The selections and styles are superior in every way. Ensembles to wear now, silk suits to wear now and all summer, printed silks to wear now and later—summer things galore!

Best of all, ask to see the printed frock hat and purse to match, of exquisite materials and coloring and superb workmanship, which sell for only $39.50 for the complete set.

Affectionately,

Radio Body Pledges Aid For Hoover

Cooperation Promised at Hot Springs Meeting. Maryland Day Program March 25—Sets Should Be Inspected Monthly.

Indicative of how the radio industry feels toward President Hoover, who as Secretary of Commerce piloted radio through its formative years, the first organization to meet since his accession to the Presidency passed the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the Radio Manufacturers Association views with satisfaction the inauguration as President of the United States of Herbert Hoover, whose knowledge of public requirements of radio, radio broadcasting and the problems of the industry dates from the origin of radio, and that we pledge to him our hearty cooperation in making radio an even greater public service in the future."

The meeting was held at Hot Springs, Va., and was also participated in by officers of the Federated Radio Trade Association and the Radio Wholesalers Association. Maj. H. H. Frost, of New York, president of the Radio Manufacturers Association, presided.

It was said that although the Chicago Radio Show was still three months away the bulk of the 30,000 square feet of display space has already been sold, and that in addition to the Stevens Hotel, said to be the largest in the world, it will take two others this year to house the gathering.

A special invitation is extended to all Marylanders, regardless as to where they may be, to listen in to a "Maryland Day" program to be broadcast from Station WBAL on the evening of March 25, which is "Maryland Day."

For this broadcast there have been chosen various patriotic selections and other music appropriate to the celebration. "Maryland Day" commemorates the landing of the first settlers on the shores of Maryland in 1633 when the Ark and the Dove sailed up the Chesapeake Bay and anchored at St. Mary's Island.

When asked the question in a radio interview over Station WPCH, in New York, "Do you believe that women are able to understand the technical end of radio at all?" William Alley, of Radio Retailing, answered.

"Certainly, women are able to understand radio technically, although it is not necessary, of course, for the ordinary owner of a receiving set to understand anything about it, technically. All a woman needs to know about a radio set is how to tune it. It isn't any more necessary for a woman to know the technicalities of radio than it is for a woman driver of an automobile to know the mechanism of a car.

"So far as being able to understand radio technicalities is concerned, I see no reason why women could not acquire that knowledge. In fact, many of the large radio factories employ women in the wiring and assembling of sets. That is work which requires skill, knowledge of radio, and speed, and women have been found speedy and efficient in doing much of the work of building sets. In fact, one of the largest radio factories employs over 3,000 women in wiring and assembling receivers and have found them just as efficient as men."

Another question was "How often should a radio set be inspected?"

Alley's reply was:

"Radio sets ought to be inspected by competent service man at least once a month. The tubes may be wearing out, there may be a loose connection somewhere, the antenna or lead-in wires may be broken, and there are any number of little things that might go wrong and result in poor reception. So, to keep a set working at top efficiency and giving the best reception, it should be inspected about once a month."

What Today Means to You

March 19.

By MARY BLAKE.

"PISCES."

If March 19 is your birthday, the best hours for you today are from 8 a. m. to 10 a. m., from 11:45 a. m. to 1:30 p. m., and from 4 p. m. to 6:30 p. m.; the danger periods are from 2 p. m. to 3:30 p. m. and from 8 p. m. to 10 p. m.

A large degree of cheerfulness will be necessary to fight the depressing influences that will be in evidence today; there will be sensed the spirit to "give up" and altogether too frequently the query will arise in your mind "what's the use?"

Children born today will always shoot straight, both in action and in thought and be admired and trusted by all those with whom they come in contact. They will be rather fastidious, without being snobbish, and are destined to find their place in the sun.

You are very emphatic and, at the same time, extreme. Tolerance and sympathy is lacking in your make-up. A weak brother or sister will receive very little assistance from you, except in so far as your strength of character may be an inspiration.

You tackle every task you handle—be it important or insignificant—with vim and enthusiasm, and once you get your teeth into a job, you never let go until it is accomplished to your entire satisfaction. You evince little, or no, interest in what onlookers may say or do and are only guided by your own judgment and conviction. You judge yourself even more sternly than you judge others.

With such a character, it is only natural that you should have few friends, although it must be conceded that these few, by their loyalty, are worth a legion; on the other hand, it can not be denied that you have many enemies. As you are more than ordinarily intelligent it is to be deplored that you can not inject a little more sympathetic understanding into your relationship with others, and you should cultivate an appreciation of other people's motives, and not measure all corn with your bushel.

In the family circle, you will be respected, and sometimes feared. Your children will never go to you with their all-engrossing, yet little, troubles for comfort or for aid, and you will miss the thrill of loving companionship.

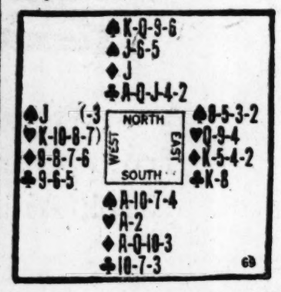
Prices realized on Swift & Co. sales of carcass beef in Washington, D. C., for week ending Saturday March 16, 1929, on shipments sold out, ranged from 19.00 cents to 23.50 cents per pound and averaged 20.88 cents per pound.—Adv.

WORK ON BRIDGE

Continuing the series of "Misplayed Hands I Have Met," I give today one in which Declarer is playing a No Trump contract.



I saw the above Auction hand correctly bid as follows: South one No Trump, which obtained the contract. Then I saw it misplayed.

On Trick 1, West led the Heart Seven; Dummy (North) played the Five; East, the Queen; South, the Ace. Trick 2, South led the Club Trey; West played the Five; North, the Jack; East, the King.

East returned his partner's Heart and West saw that his only hope of making his long Hearts was to lose this trick and trust that East has another entry and another Heart. So West ducked. North won with the Jack, and Declarer made a Small Slam.

Outside of the fact that West could have saved the Small Slam by playing the King on the second Heart trick, do you see how East and West could have obtained a better result?

THE CORRECT PLAY.

West led the Seven of Hearts to the first trick; so, by the Rule of Eleven, there were four Hearts higher than the Seven not in West's hand. East could see three of the four in his own hand and Dummy, consequently South must have just one Heart higher than the Seven. The four Hearts higher than the Seven that East could not see—one of which South must have—were the Eight, Ten, King and Ace. It was obvious if South held Ace or King, it would be a serious sacrifice for East to play his Queen on this trick; but if South had the Ten, West leading from Ace and King, East must play the Queen to win the trick and keep Declarer from taking an unnecessary Heart. West's lead could not determine the question; but South's bid gave the needed information. South would not have the Heart suit stopped unless he had Ace or King. East, seeing Ace-Queen-Jack of Clubs in Dummy and King in his own hand, knew that South did not have Clubs stopped. South would not have bid No Trump with two unstopped suit, so he must have the Ace or King of Hearts. Consequently East should not have played his Queen of Hearts on trick 1.

It will be noted that holding up the Queen would have enabled East and West to make four Hearts and one Club, and saved not only the slam but the game.

Bridge Play Given Today Over WRC

Kansas City Woman and St. Louis Lecturer Meet Work and Whitehead. Classic Music by French Composers at 8 P. M.

The nineteenth of a series of twenty radio auction bridge games will be broadcast from WRC at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Each game of the series features Milton C. Work and Wilbur C. Whitehead, New York experts, in association with players from cities throughout America and Canada. The listeners-in are urged to have four players ready with cards and to follow the game bid by bid and play by play as broadcast over WRC.

The contestants in the nineteenth game are Mrs. Clyde Bissett, of Kansas City, Mo., who, in addition to being a skillful player, is noted as a teacher and lecturer on bridge; C. Drummond Jones, of St. Louis, Mo., former holder of many tennis championships, who ranks among the greatest of bridge players and has won many important contests as a representative of the Racquet Club, of St. Louis, and Mr. Work and Mr. Whitehead.

Following are the advance hands for game nineteeen:

Mr. Milton C Work, "South," the dealer, holds: Spades, A-K-J-9-5-3; hearts, A-Q; diamonds, K-Q-J; clubs, 4-3.

Mr. C. Drummond Jones, "West," holds: Spades, 4; hearts, K-9-6; diamonds, A-6-3; clubs, A-J-10-9-7-2.

Mrs. Clyde Bissett, "North," holds: Spades, Q-7-2; hearts, J-10-4; diamonds, 10-8-5; clubs, K-8-6-5.

Mr. Wilbur C. Whitehead, "East," holds: Spades, 10-8-6; hearts, 8-7-5-3-2; diamonds, 9-7-4-2; clubs, Q.

The "Be Kind to Apples Week Club," Tweedleville, Mo., and a mammy song sent Jeremy Scott from the center of the spinach industry to Broadway. There he puts over his song and wins the girl.

How it all happened is a riotous tale of nonsense to be broadcast over the Eveready Hour at 9 o'clock from WRC. Don Barclay, former star of the Ziegfeld Follies, will be the principal.

Classic music by French composers has been chosen for the recital by Genia Fonariova, mezzo-soprano, and a concert orchestra, at 8 o'clock. Selections from Massenet's "Scenes Alsaciennes" are listed among the solos for Miss Fonariova and the orchestral features will include the 'Barcarolle" from "Tales of Hoffman" and Luigini's "Ballet Egyptien."

The noveltry of using a male quartet to supply the accompaniment for a violin solo will be featured in the Pro-Phy-Lac-Tic program at 8:30 o'clock from WRC. "Auf Wiedersehen," played as a violin solo by Bert Hirsch, will be the selection.

Another Radio-Keith-Orpheum Hour will be presented from 11 o'clock until midnight by WRC.

The following selections have been announced for the Paul Whiteman Orchestra from Station WMAL at 9 o'clock:

(1) "Canadian Capers" and "When Summer Is Gone; (2) medley of "Gypsy Blues," "When Budha Smiles," "Sweet Lady," "My Man" and "Dear Old Southland;" (3) waltz medley, Hawaiian, "One Two Three Four," "Honolulu Eyes" and "Aloha Oe;" (4) tango medley, "Roseroom," "Irresistible" and "La Seduction;" (5) Rhythm Boys; (6) "In a Little Spanish Town" and "Where the Shy Little Violets Grow;" (7) medley of "In the Shadows," "California in the Morning," "Bamballia," "California, Here I Come," "I'll Get By" and "Hot Lips."

"Earrings," a composition by R. Meredith Willson, will be heard during the Voice of Columbia program at 10 o'clock.

The Mobo Entertainers and Frederic William Wile will be heard during the early part of the evening.

"Aviation as It Is Today" is the subject upon which Walter Hinton will speak this evening at 9:15 o'clock over WJSV. It will be remembered that Hinton was pilot of the first transatlantic plane, the NC-4. He also flew the first plane between North and South America and was the first man to use the airplane in exploration work, when he and Capt. A. W. Stevens flew over and mapped more than 12,000 square miles of the Amazon River territory in Brazil.

Agnes Warriner, soprano, and Leslie Coyle, tenor, will be among the soloists heard from WJSV during the evening.

Station WOL will be on the air from 6 to 8 o'clock this evening, presenting several short programs, and again from 10 o'clock to midnight, with two hours of dance music.

New York, March 18, 1929.

While there is a tendency for fur to disappear from the collars of coats for daytime wear, the fur collar continues to be an indispensable part of the evening coat.

Although flat furs are most popular for the afternoon coat, fox remains supreme for evening, and with good reason, for its soft elegance provides a charming and aristocratic frame for Milady's deftly coiffed head.

Paquin has given a new note to the fox collar by removing the head but leaving the tail to hang at the lower end.

• • • •

A charming model seen at Redfern, breathlessly elegant, was of cloth of gold embroidered in gold, with a deep collar of blond fox, and wide cuffs and a broad band at the bottom of the same costly fur.

Another evening coat at this same house was of silver lame (lah-may), with small lozenges of red, green and mauve velvet and embroidered in white beads, the whole being given its final touch of richness by a deep collar of white fox and wide cuffs of the same fur on the flaring sleeves.

New Sleeve Ideas!

It's a far cry from grandmother's leg-o'-mutton to the beautiful sleeves one sees in the mode today—fortunately. Nor are today's sleeves half the mystery they were then, even though much more beautiful. They take care and imagination to execute, of course, but when you have us to make an illustrated leaflet for you with more than a dozen new and truly delightful sleeve ideas and designs, what need have you to give the problem of new sleeves for your spring garments a second thought?

That is, if you don't put off until tomorrow sending your stamped self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for the leaflet!

How does the weather look for your Easter morning outfit? If it doesn't look favorable, then, sh-h-h—has any little bird thought to remind you of those wonderful after-Easter sales that are held every year?

Elegance is never obvious, and Monsieur Redfern has always known and acted upon this fact. Nor can plainness be simplicity, never.

Who can doubt, looking at the gown we have illustrated for you today, that elegance can be achieved in a number of subtle ways? All in the cut and stitching that is responsible for the lovely silhouette, you see!

The Reversible Coat.

It is true that the idea of the reversible coat is not new, but, like every other worthwhile idea with more than just the fashion of fad behind it, it endures.

Requiring as it does, the most expert tailoring, it is a little beyond the craftsmanship of the average dressmaker. Reversible coats, which save the price of two linings and give one two coats in the bargain, are worth the price of good, if somewhat expensive, tailoring in the first place.

The Sunday issue contains a weekly letter which is full of interesting news on the latest in fashions.

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES M'DONALD

Dear Miss McDonald: I am in the most embarrassing position possible. Two years ago I was engaged to be married and the day was set when I met another man, and knew that I could not possibly marry my fiance. I broke my engagement, as the second man was making violent love to me, but did not tell me he was married.

He only told me of his marriage when I told him I had broken my engagement. I was shocked and caused quite a scene. We parted and tried to stay parted, but could not. It began all over again and at last his wife came to see my mother. The result was I had to leave home, as mother was simply out of her mind over it. Through it all I stood by him and would not give him up. At last his wife got a divorce, and every one naturally expected us to marry. But he never even mentioned such a thing. At last I told him that he had better stop calling on me since he was just seeking a means of passing the time. He said we had better get married instead. So I announced our engagement and the date of the wedding. Within 30 days of the wedding he now informs me that he simply can not deliberately make a second mistake. He says he is in love with another girl, and also still in love with his wife.

I hardly know whether to think him crazy and be thankful I missed him, or hold him to his engagement. He says I am the only one when we are together, but the minute we are apart the other two take possession of him. Did you ever know such a man? Is he worth trying to hold? KATHLEEN.

Oh, I've known a lot of men just like that Kathleen, only they do not come out and admit it. In fact they would deny it with considerable heat. But most of them are just like your mystifying Romeo. The "come-hither-look" and the world is forgotten, even when part of the world is a wife. And, sad but true, Kathleen, if you can get a man to forget his wife some other girl can get him to forget you! It's just that he is that kind of man. Some one once asked me to sponsor a law that would make it a punishable crime for a married man to carry on a flirtation. It might just as well be made a punishable crime for a married man to be round shouldered or have crossed eyes. It's the man's nature, or it isn't.

Now in your case your man has an aggravated case of whatever it is that makes a man susceptible to woman's lure. He still loves his wife, still loved her all the time that you had him under your spell. Now there is another. These things can not be legislated right or wrong, but they can be intelligently understood. And if you intelligently understand this man you will certainly not try to "hold him to his engagement." "Holding" a man against his will is energy expended in a poor case. Let the poor man go. He will probably go back to his wife, but better that than to have him on your hands, half yours, half the other one's, all minced up and a sight. Let him go, Kathleen, and next time you feel any glory in vamping just say to yourself, "What I can do to this man, any other girl could do, for its just that he is that kind of man."

Set him free. He will probably come back on his knees and tell you that you are the only one. You can't tell a thing about these men. They get more like us every day.

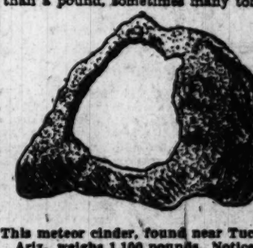
What Meteor Cinders Are Like.

How large are meteors? We can not say what is the size of the largest, but some are certainly larger than a schoolroom before they are burned away by rubbing against the air.

Cinders of meteors differ a great deal in size. Sometimes they weigh less than a pound, sometimes many tons.



This meteor cinder, found near Tucson, Ariz., weighs 1,100 pounds. Notice the hole burned in passage through air.

A meteor was seen to fall in Hungary in 1866. It sank into the ground, but men dug it out—finding it 11 feet below the surface. That meteor cinder weighs 547 pounds.

In the British Museum there is a meteor cinder which weighs 3½ tons.

At the American Museum of New York I saw a much larger one than that. It was brought from Greenland and weighs 36 tons. It is one of the largest ever found.

The "hot stones from heaven" were worshiped by people of ancient times—in Syria and in Greece. One meteor cinder was called "Venus," though its form would not have made that goddess proud.

Meteor cinders are nothing to worship, wonderul though they are. Tools have been made to see what they are made of. Some of them contain iron and nickel. Others have been found to contain carbon, aluminum and sulphur. A few carry traces of gold, silver or platinum.

A traveler in Greenland found that the native Eskimos were taking iron from one large meteor cinder in order to make knives.

"This stone," said the Eskimos, "was rolled out of heaven by evil spirits."

A huge meteor—probably the largest which ever struck the earth—fell in Siberia several years ago. Russian scientists recently started on a trip to learn the facts about that meteor.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

TONSILS OR NO TONSILS.

Medical opinion, as found in the literature, is becoming quite conservative in the matter of removal of tonsils. In a recent study of heart disease in children and the relation of rheumatism thereto, Wilson, Lingg and Croxford say: "The routine removal of tonsils for the prevention of rheumatic heart disease in children is not based on conclusive data."

"Routine removal" means taking out the tonsils rather regardless of the condition in which they are. The authors do not say that such treatment is not effective. Their statement is that in their study the efficacy of that method of prevention was not proved.

An editorial in the Medical Journal and Record runs to other reasons for removing the tonsils. This editorial is based on two extensive studies of the effects from removing tonsils. One of these was made by Dr. Kaiser, of Rochester. His investigation was as to the effects as they had shown themselves for a period of three to five years after removal. He found that when the removal had been done as means of reducing susceptibility to colds and of curing running ears, the operation had done good. In the general run of cases it had not accomplished much except in these two particulars, one a matter of prevention, the other, of cure.

The other study quoted by the editorial was one made by Collins and Sydenstricker and published as Bulletin 175, United States Public Health service. They found the tonsillitis rate in children varied according to age. Each 1,000 children 2 years of age had 50 attcks of tonsillitis a year. The rate rose from 50 at 2 years of age to 175 at 11 years of age. It then fell until it reached 80 at 24 years of age. The rate of children in the grades was 100. There is one attack per year of tonsillitis in each 10 children, or 5 in a 50 pupil schoolroom.

Among children whose tonsils had been removed the attack rate was not lowered. Removal of tonsils was of no service in diminishing the tonsillitis attack rate. They found the results of operation disappointing also as a preventive of heart disease in children and as a means of preventing and curing enlarged glands in the neck.

When removal of tonsils was done to overcome underweight and retardation the more immediate effect was very satisfactory. During a few months the children operated on gained in weight, grew rapidly and improved mentally. But the effect was short lived. It did not continue long. The operation, tonsillectomy, they called "crude" and expressed the opinion that it would soon be superseded by "some more refined procedure."

SENNA IS HABIT-FORMING.

H. J. C. writes: It is necessary for me to take senna leaves chopped up with raisins every night on going to bed to insure a bowel movement next day. I have done this for a number of years, but of late I have been wondering if this is harmful. I have tried to get away from the habit, but my bowels will not move. Should I break away or, in your opinion, is it all right to continue as I am? I feel all right taking this mixture as I do, but wonder if the senna leaves have created the habit of having to take them. I have been bothered with constipation for about 35 years. I am now 54.

REPLY.

Senna is a simple cathartic, about the least harmful of its class, but you have run into the difficulty that sooner or later comes to those who use it. It is habit-forming.

You may be able to break your constipation habit by abandoning the use of senna and living on a milk-vegetable-fruit diet. Use sour milk and sour-milk preparations in abundance.

If you fail to diet yourself away from your habit I think a physician with some experience in breaking the constipation habit with diet could cure you.

MARCH 19.

Alice French, the American author, better known under her pen name of Olive Thanet, was born this day, 1850.

She began writing on economics, sociology and similar themes in 1878, but in time found her best medium of expression in the short story.

Miss French took up her residence in Iowa and Arkansas and was thus able to write of a new field of experience hitherto unexploited for its literary possibilities. Her principal works include "The Bishop's Vagabond," "Knitters in the Sun," "Otto the Knight," "A Book of True Loves," "The Man of the Hour," "Stories That End Well," "A Step on the Stairs," and "Expiation." The latter novel won exceptionally high praise. Miss French also edited "The Best Letters of Mary Wortley Montague."

THE STUDYING CADDIE.

"Boss," said he, "Ah'se studyin'
On dis yeah' eighteenth hole,
A-studyin' mah problems out
Ob bread an' meat an' coal.
Yas, suh, I'se mighty puzzled,
As now I'm tellin' you
Today is Saturday—yas, suh!
An' mah week's rent is due.

"A cullud man mus' figger
What's comin' wid de night,
He's got to count his money
An' do his countin' right.
Dat rent man's hard, I tell you,
He look you in de face
An' say: 'Boy, flash dat money
Or quit dis shelter place.'

"Ah knows dat man ain't foolin',
Jes' what he says he means.
Ah got to hab dis evenin'
Fo' dollars in mah jeans.
And dat ain't all my problem,
De kids mus' eat somehow.
How gwine ter come da money?
Dat's what Ah'se studyin' now."

I chuckled as I gave him
An extra tip that day,
I chuckled as I saw him
Go smiling on his way,
And still I sit and chuckle
As I recall his case
And see the sad expression

BEARS WIN CONTROL IN SHIFTING MARKET

Heavy Profit-Taking Marks Confusing Trading—Radio (Old) Slumps.

BALDWIN RISES TO 256

New York, March 18 (A.P.).—Control of the stock market shifted between opposing factions in a most confusing manner today, with the bears gaining the advantage in the last hour, when call money began to tighten.

Profit taking was heavy through the session, particularly in the Radio shares, the old stock losing 49 points of the 103-point gain of last week; but operators for the advance, aided by merger and stock split-up rumors, met with marked success in various sections of the list, particularly in the coppers, rubbers, railway and office equipment issues and specialties.

The expected stringency in call money this week, resulting from the sending of the income-tax checks to the banks for payment, made its appearance late in the day with an increase in the rate from 7 to 8 per cent. Time money held firm, with practically none available under 8 per cent.

Statement Regarded Bullishly.

A somewhat bullish interpretation was placed upon the statement of Gov. Roy A. Young of the Federal Reserve Board that a higher rediscount rate would be employed only as a last resort. Wall street bankers were disposed to the belief that the Reserve officials regard the rediscount rate as a possible means of effecting liquidation of stock-market loans, but fear that its use would seriously hamper business.

The day's news was meager although it included a further upward tendency in copper prices, with a little moving at 22 cents a pound, a jump of 1 cent, but with producers, for the most part, undecided as to what price to quote. Youngstown Sheet & Tube published a good earnings statement.

The old radio shares fell back to 500, while the new shares sold at one time below 100, but closed at 101. Victor Talking Machine, however, which is being consolidated with Radio, mounted more than 24 points, to a new top at 300.

Baldwin at New 1929 Peak.

Baldwin Locomotive soared 26 points, to a new 1929 peak at 256, on rumors of a four-for-one stock split-up and revival of reports that the Cutten-Fisher interests are planning to merge it with Westinghouse. Otis Elevator, also mentioned in split-up rumors, shot up 15 points, to a new high.

The nonferrous metals were generally strong. National Lead mounting about 16 points, to a new top at 166, and Greene Cananea gaining new high ground with a jump of more than 5 points. Anaconda, Nevada, Miami and Kennecott also tallied new peaks, but reacted toward the close. United States Steel lost more than a point, but Youngstown Sheet & Tube and Follansbee both gained new high ground.

Underwood-Elliott-Fisher sold up about 8 points, to a new top. A similar gain in National Cash Register revived talk of a merger of these companies, but this was denied by Underwood officials. It was stated that Underwood's earnings are running at the rate of about $10 a share this year. Burroughs Adding Machine also reached new high ground.

American International Soars.

American International made an extreme gain of about 6 points on reports that it had realized large profits from holdings in Chase National Bank and radio stock. Lambert recorded a new top at 151 in buying attributed to estimates that 1929 earnings will reach $12 a share, and on reports that the company is making rapid progress in the British market. Trico Products touched 51, then reacted. The recent advance in this stock is said to have been in anticipation of an announcement of a $5,000,000 order from General Motors.

Merchandising shares were generally weak, Macy and Filenes losing more than 4 points each. Rossia Insurance lost 10 points, Johns-Manville 8, and Commercial Solvents 6 points. Allied Chemical, American & Foreign Power, Calumet & Arizona, Coty, Houston Oil, General Electric and Wright Aero were among issues sagging from 2 to 3 points.

The commodity markets were generally heavy, cotton losing more than $1 a bale on lower Liverpool cables and fair weather over the belt. Wheat eased on lack of export demand and better weather, despite a decrease in the visible supply, and corn sagged.

Foreign exchanges were generally firm, with sterling ruling a fraction higher. The pesets continued its decline, however, going below 15 cents.

GOVERNMENT BONDS SHOW IMPROVEMENT

Anaconda 7s Again Leaders in Convertibles' Move Forward.

UTILITIES REMAIN QUIET

New York, March 18 (A.P.).—Sharp improvement in the United States Government securities imparted a firmer tone to the bond market today, and in the early hour attracted considerable buying. A little selling cropped out in the late afternoon, and some of the speculative leaders' gains were converted into fractional losses.

The early buying was regarded as a further response to Secretary of the Treasury Mellon's statement recommending the purchase of bonds. Time money continued firm, with 8 per cent demanded for most maturities.

Anaconda Copper 7s and American International 5½s were the leaders of the convertibles, the Copper 7s touching a new high at 253⅝ before reacting to 250 on profit taking at the close. American International 5½s touched 107 in sympathy with strength in the stock and closed at 106¼ for a gain of nearly a point on the day.

Seaboard Adjustment 5s Slump.

A break of more than 5 points in Seaboard Air Line adjustment 5s, on which interest requirements were not made last year, featured the otherwise improved rail group. The Baltimore & Ohio issues displayed a firmer tone, following their decline of last year, but Chesapeake & Ohio refunding 4½s A were heavy. Hudson & Manhattan adjustment income 5s, of the New York Tractions, dropped more than a point on reports of stiff bus competition.

Industrials ran into selling after several days of independent strength. Certain-teed 5½s were down nearly 2 points. Reports of opposition to United States Steel's debt-retirement plan carried the sinking fund 5s off fractionally. International Cement 5s improved in anticipation of heavy construction programs this summer.

Utilities Move Little.

There was little interest exhibited in the utilities, and the price changes were within narrow limits. American Telephone sinking fund 5s were under pressure, and International Telephone convertible 4½s closed fractionally lower after an early display of strength. Public Service of New Jersey 4½s slumped 2 points, but Columbia Gas & Electric 5s advanced.

Liberty first 4¼s were the feature of the Government obligations, advancing ½ point, while the fourth 4¼s were up nearly ½ point. Treasury 4s closed lower after an early advance.

Conflicting price movements marked the trading in foreign securities. Montecatini 7s, with warrants, advanced nearly 2 points. Mexican 5s of 1945 were down 1¾ at the close.

NATS RELEASE KENNA AND YOTER TO MINNEAPOLIS

Almost the Naked Truth

By JAMES S. COLLINS

NEW YORK, March 18 (N.Y.W.N.S.)—All Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis needs to qualify as a full-fledged Santa Claus is a set of white chin spinach, a pair of red pants and a pack on his back. Christmas this year came in March for those nine players whom he declared free agents after he had satisfied himself that they were victims of "covering-up" tactics that are often resorted to by club owners to retain title to players.

Earlier in the season he declared Dick Farrell, a Columbus catcher, a free agent and young Mr. Farrell was able to sell himself to the Browns for the handsome sum of $25,000. Several of the players turned adrift Saturday will be able to dispose of themselves to big league clubs for $10,000 or more each.

It is quite likely that Landis will also release a number of other players who have been subjected to the same covering-up process. As everybody connected with baseball knows, the practice is very common, but usually the transaction is so camouflaged that evidence of illegality is hard to obtain. Deals made by clubs employing the "chain store" system are coming in for close scrutiny by the commissioner.

Griffith Wasting His Time in Bucking Baseball Law.

President Clark Griffith, who lost three valuable players and was fined $1,500, announces that he will demand a rehearing of the cases. Meanwhile he refuses to pay the $1,500 fines. If Griffith has any idea of bucking Landis he is wasting his time. Landis is only enforcing baseball law made by the magnates themselves and they can do nothing but uphold him no matter whom enforcement hits or how hard. At least one other major league club is suspected of engaging in "covering up" players on a scale that makes Washington's operations seem picayune in comparison. If every player believed to have been "covered up" by this club is made a free agent, the ivory market will be flooded.

Gil Dobie Says Its Worth $25,000 to Quit Cornell.

Speaking of selling one's self recalls the transaction engineered by Doleful Gil Dobie, of Cornell. Always adept at painting drab outlooks, Doleful Dobie was able to convince Herbert Mason, wealthy alumnus, of Tulsa, Okla., that he was so terrible as a football coach that it was worth upward of $25,000 to buy him for deposit on the dump.

Dobie, as canny a Scot as ever amused himself by looking at a dime through a magnifying glass, had a contract good through the season of 1933. Cornell men, eager to be rid of him following a disastrous period on the gridiron, offered him $25,000 to quit Ithaca. Pointing out that this would not compensate him for relinquishing a salary of $12,000 a year and the use of a house, Dobie refused the offer and was able to convince Mason that it was worth more than that to get rid of him.

Magee, as Ball Player, was Dread of All Umpires.

Dobie is said to be negotiating for a coaching job in the Far West that will pay practically the same amount as he has been getting at Ithaca. So the $30,000 or so he will receive for releasing Cornell is pure velvet. Dobie may be the gigantic flop he thinks he is as a football coach, but as a business man he is not so dumb.

On one memorable occasion, in the middle of the 1911 season, Sherry's objection to a decision by Umpire Jim Finneran took the form of a knockout wallop to the point of Mr. Finneran's chin. Tom Lynch, then president of the league, suspended Sherry for the balance of the season.

But Magee as Umpire was Dread of All Ball Players.

The Phillies were in the pennant hunt that season and the suspension of Magee, their star batsman, was a severe blow. He had been out about a month when broken legs suffered by Manager Charley Dooin and Outfielder John Titus, of the Phils, induced Pres-

Favorites Win In Tourney Battles

United Grays, Potomac B. C. Set Stage for Clash Tonight.

Four J. C. C. Teams to Play in S. Atlantic Games at G. W.

ALL the rivalry which has cropped up between the United Typewriter Grays and the Potomac Boat Club will be given an outlet tonight at the George Washington Gymnasium in the South Atlantic A. A. U. Championship Tournament, which The Washington Post is staging in cooperation with the South Atlantic basket ball committee.

Last night's battles set the stage for this contest. The Typewriter Grays polished off the Comets, 42-22, while the Potomac Boatmen defeated the Company E Team of the District Guards, 34-24. The Potomacs and Grays have met on two other occasions this year, with the latter club taking decisions by 3 and 8 points.

However, this game will be hard put to take the spotlight away from the other contests. Four Jewish Center teams, all favorites in their respective divisions, will see action against worthy opponents.

The Unlimited Center Team meets the crack Company F Team of the Hyattsville National Guard. One of the best teams in the unlimited class will pass from the action when the result is known. Both clubs depend on speed and zone defense, which should make for an interesting exhibition.

French Co. 145-Pounders Show Superior Form in Victory.

In the 145-pound class, the Howard A. French Co. five advanced to the second round at the expense of a fighting St. Martin's Cardinal Five. The French team displayed some of the snappiest passing and pot shooting of the tournament.

The Kanawhas again displayed top form in defeating the Rockville Five for their second 130-pound class victory while the Clark Griffiths made a good impression in the 100-pound class by taking the Noel House Team into camp, 39 to 25.

The Jewish Community Center girls lived up to their reputation as a strong team by swamping the Roxie A. C. The latter club was much lighter than its rivals, however?

The four lighter-class games scheduled for tonight are all "naturals." In the 145-pound class, the J. C. C. team meets the Brentwood Hawks. In the 130-pound division, the Curtain Wonders, odds-on favorites, face the Westerners while Aztec and J. C. C. teams meet in both the 100 and 115-pound class.

Griffith 100-Pounders Win From Noel House Team.

The tournament got off to a furious start for the week yesterday when the Clark Griffith Five eliminated the Noel House Quintet, 39 to 25, in the 100-pound class.

As the score indicates, the game was closely contested throughout and was won by the Griffiths only by a spurt in the last quarter. The Griffs had "Pep" Hunter as their star and this performer justified the dependence placed in him by carrying off the honors for his team in the scoring of seven baskets and one foul shot for 15 points. Only Kemp, running mate as forward, came near Hunter in totaling the most number of points, three baskets and three free throws for 9 points being his share in the game.

Dempsey to Promote Mandell-Miller Battle

New York, March 18 (A.P.).—Jack Dempsey, the promoter, announced tonight he had persuaded Sammy Mandell, the "Rockford Sheik" to defend his lightweight championship against Ray Miller, the Chicago left hook artist, "sometime in June." The fight, Dempsey said, probably would be held either in Detroit or New York.

The old Manassa Mauler hopes to stage the bout on June 7, either at Detroit or New York, with the former city the more likely place.

Dempsey asserted that Miller would get the title "shot" regardless of the outcome of his battle with Jimmy McLarnin at Madison Square Garden Friday night.

"Miller is a legitimate lightweight; McLarnin a welterweight," Dempsey pointed out. "The result of Friday's fight won't affect my plans at all."

The former heavyweight champion made it clear that this proposed bout would be promoted solely by himself, his first venture unassisted in the promotion field. He said that even if he were to come to an agreement with Humbert J. Fugazy, Metropolitan promoter, or the Madison Square Garden Corporation or any other promoter, the Miller-Mandell battle would be his own "brain child."

FUGAZY'S BID MAY LURE DEMPSEY

Alliance Hinted After Parley; Statement Is Due Friday.

NEW YORK, March 18 (A.P.).—Speculation that Jack Dempsey would join forces with Humbert J. Fugazy, metropolitan rival of the late Tex Rickard, developed anew today after the former heavyweight champion reopened negotiations with Fugazy. After several hours of conferences both said a definite announcement would be made Friday at noon, thus indicating they had a positive statement to make, but leaving the facts a matter of guesswork meanwhile.

Dempsey broke off his original negotiations with Fugazy last week to consider promotorial offers in Detroit. He returned to New York yesterday and immediately arranged for new conferences with Fugazy and his attorneys. Dempsey rejected the promoter's first offer, but gave him until today to revise his figures.

While the former champion and Fugazy both refused to discuss the situation until the formal announcement Friday, is was indicated Dempsey has decided definitely against alignment with the Madison Square Garden.

Dempsey's alliance, if any, with Fugazy, may be only temporary or for some specific piece of fistic promotion, it was suggested. This would be consistent with the former champions idea of going where the going is good and not attaching himself permanently to any one individual or organization.

Carey to Head Garden, Board Will Announce

New York, March 18 (A.P.).—Richard F. Hoyt, chairman of the board of directors of Madison Square Garden, announced tonight that William F. Carey would be officially named head of the Garden at a meeting of the board tomorrow. The announcement was made at a banquet given to Carey by New York newspaper men.

Carey is to become president of the corporation, a position he has held, to all intents and purposes, but not officially, since the death of Tex Rickard.

The announcement came as a complete surprise to the newspaper men. They had given the dinner as a mark of appreciation for the way they had been treated at Miami Beach, where the recent Sharkey-Stribling heavyweight match was held.

Title Is Saved; Sonnenberg Winner

3,500 See Champion Pin McCarthy to Mat Forthwith.

First Fall Produced by Flying Tackle in 16 Minutes.

By JACK ESPEY.

"DYNAMITE GUS" Sonnenberg, the young king of heavyweight wrestlers who is traveling all over the place taking money from people who want to see his flying tackle which he brought to the mat from the Dartmouth College gridiron, accepted a neat sum from about 3,500 of our sporting citizens at the Washington Auditorium last night and, intimating he wanted to do business with them again, gave them their money's worth.

Young Mr. Sonnenberg, a short but bulkily assembled athlete, has been hopping about from town to town with his exhibitions for the past two months, or, ever since his now famous flying tackle shook the heavyweight crown from the head of Ed "Strangler" Lewis onto his own. From the looks of things, Mr. Sonnenberg will be hopping about tackling this fellow and that for many months hence, still wearing the distinctive head piece.

For, the flying tackle is a terrible weapon, which few if any men can withstand when and in the manner that Gus applies it. Certainly, Pat McCarthy will tell you that.

McCarthy the Other Heavyweight In the Ring Last Night.

Pat, by the way, was the other heavyweight in the ring last night. "Dynamite Gus" threw him twice in succession. And poor Pat, who never had seen Sonnenberg until they met in the ring, will be satisfied if he never sees him again. But Pat will swear that the flying tackle is a most valuable implement in the trade and that he wished he had one, too.

At this stage of his professional career, Sonnenberg still has much to learn about the fine points of the game, but he has nothing to worry about so long as he uses the flying tackle before his opponent makes ready to throw him.

Sonnenberg applied the flying tackle at just the right time last night. Immediately before he had taken quite a bad thumping from a series of McCarthy's holds. He was on the point of weakening when he scrambled out of Pat's arms and leaped to his feet. Quickly taking a few steps backward, he rushed McCarthy and dived for his legs, closing them within his arms, and the ponderous Irishman, who had not completely raised himself from the floor, dropped on his back as if hit by a piledriver.

Then, no sooner than he had done this, "Dynamite Gus" prepared for another rush, and as McCarthy tried to stand up, crashed into him once more, his head burrowing into McCarthy's ample midsection. Pat dropped again, this time for keeps, and thus the first fall was completed. The timer's watch had ticked off 16 minutes, 15 seconds from the start, but it took Sonnenberg less than 30 seconds to throw his man with the tackle.

Pat Is Easy Victim After Trying Own Flying Tackle.

Pat got to his feet in pain and spent the five-minute period of intermission trying to regain his wind. Sonnenberg, too, tired from the mauling and hauling which consumed the first fifteen minutes, welcomed the rest period.

Returning to action, McCarthy clumsily rushed the champion, evidently in the hope of doing something resembling a flying tackle. But Gus sidestepped to safety. Finally they clinched and rolled over on the mat with Gus on top. Sonnenberg wrenched himself free and picked up McCarthy's legs as he arose. The Irishman, either too weak to continue or still dazed from the force of the tackles, was then an easy victim for a jack-knife hold and the match was over. The second fall took three minutes.

This topped off an enjoyable evening,

Lloyd Waner Accepts Pirates' Terms; Macks, Tigers, Braves and Giants Win

SAN FRANCISCO, March 18 (A.P.).—Lloyd Waner has come to an agreement with the Pittsburgh Pirates, the management of the club announced here today. Waner is on his way to San Francisco from Ada, Okla., to sign his contract for the coming season, it was announced. The terms were not disclosed.

Sam Dreyfuss, treasurer of the Pittsburgh Nationals, who made the announcement, said the club and the younger of the two Waner brothers were fully satisfied. It is understood that the 21-year-old outfielder has been given a salary of $10,000 a year. This is less than he asked but more than the club first offered him.

Dreyfuss said that no word had been received from Paul Waner, older brother and outfielding star of the National League for several years. There were strong indications, however, that Paul would come to terms in the near future. It is reported that Paul is asking a salary of between $18,000 and $20,000. It is believed the Pirate management intends to come close to that figure.

The announcement of Waner's acceptance was confirmed here this afternoon by Barney Dreyfuss, president of the Pittsburgh Club. Dreyfuss issued the following statement to Pittsburgh newspaper men who accompanied the team West for training:

"Lloyd Waner has accepted terms and is on his way to join the club here."

Oklahoma City, Okla., March 18 (A.P.).—Lloyd Waner, famous holdout, late today confirmed report from San Francisco that he had reached a salary agreement with the Pittsburgh National League management. He will leave for the Pirates' training camp in California tomorrow, he said.

The agreement does not affect Paul, his older brother, who also has been holding out for an increase Loyd said. He declined to make public the amount he agreed to.

Lloyd confirmed the report when he returned home from a fishing trip with Paul and found a final telegram from the Pirate management awaiting him. Relatives previously had denied that he had come to terms.

Commissioner Landis Sees White Sox Drills.

Dallas, Tex., March 18 (U.P.).—The Chicago White Sox displayed their wares before Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis in two snappy workouts today. Manager Lena Blackburne will take his players to Corsicana Tuesday to play an exhibition game with the Dallas Steers at their training camp there.

Macks' Rookie Victim Of Old Coaching Ruse

Fort Myers, Fla., March 18 (A.P.). A rookie pitcher of the Philadelphia Athletics was a victim of one of the oldest tricks in baseball today, although the Athletics beat the Newark Bears, 8 to 4.

Kinckle was pitching for the Athletics in the ninth inning when Coach Onslow, of the Bears, asked the rookie to throw him the ball. Kinckle did, and Conlon, of the Bears, scored from second base and Wrightstone took third before the Athletics got the ball away from Onslow.

FORT MYERS, Fla., March 18 (A.P.).—Six singles, a double and an error in the first inning gave the Philadelphia Americans a lead that the Newark Bears, International Leaguers, could not overcome, and they were defeated today, 8 to 4.

An unusual play occurred in the ninth inning when Coach Onslow of the Bears, asked Pitcher Kinckle, of the Athletics, to throw him the ball. Conlon, of the Bears, scored from second and Wrightstone took third before the Athletics got the ball away from Onslow.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 18 (U.P.).—The New York Yankees ran through a three-hour workout this morning and took the afternoon off to see the Boston Braves defeat the St. Louis Cardinals. Miller Huggins and Col. Jacob Ruppert spent the morning in conference and received telephone calls from several players who were declared free agents by Commissioner K. M. Landis. Breadon Says Cards Not After Free Agents.

Avon Park, Fla., March 18 (U.P.).—Although Clarence Jonnard, catcher for the St. Louis Cardinals, reported he had been in communication by telephone with his brother, Claude, President Sam Breadon today announced he would not bid for the services of the former St. Louis Browns hurler, who was declared a free agent by Commissioner K. M. Landis.

Wingard's Price Too High, Says Uncle Robbie.

Clearwater, Fla., March 18 (U.P.).—Wilbert Robinson, manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, announced today that the club was hot in the market for the services of Pitcher Ernest Wingard, who recently was declared a free agent by Commissioner K. M. Landis. According to Robinson, the figure asked by Wingard as a bonus for signing is too large. Wingard, when made a free agent, was training with the Philadelphia Americans.

The Dodgers are preparing for their first game with another major league team next Wednesday, when they tackle the Phillies. The Dodgers and Braves have arranged an exhibition game to be played here next Sunday.

San Francisco, March 18 (United Press).—The Pittsburgh Pirates were defeated by the San Francisco Seals for the second time in two days here today, 4 to 2.

2 Rookies Fail To Impress Johnson

Squad Is Cut to 26; Pitching Shortage Is Critical.

Team Hard Pressed With Only 7 Hurlers Now Available.

By FRANK H. YOUNG
(Staff Correspondent of The Post).

TAMPA, Fla., March 18.—Walter Johnson lopped two rookies off the Washington payroll today, consigning Catcher Ed Kenna and Infielder Emil Yoter to the Minneapolis Club, from which they were purchased last season.

Kenna and Yoter failed to impress Johnson in the short time they were with the club. Kenna joined the Nationals at the fag end of last season and worked behind the bat in several games. He was touted as a peppery, hard-hitting catcher and accurate thrower, but his batting with the Nationals was weak and his errors frequent. Yoter, once brought into the big leagues by the Chicago Cubs for a reported purchase price of $50,000, is not deemed major-league caliber after three weeks in the Washington camp here. Playing at third base in the exhibition games, Yoter displayed a weak arm, his errors on throws contributing to the Nationals' defeats.

The first pruning of the Nationals Squad leaves Manager Johnson with only 26 players. Conditions have eliminated a lot of guesswork on Johnson's part and some of his problems have been answered for him. The illness and return home of Harley Boss brought out Charlie Gooch as reserve first sacker, and Yoter's failure to deliver under fire makes the Nationals' infield for the season practically intact.

Judge Landis saved Walter the trouble—and chance of making a mistake—of selecting his outfield by ruling Melburn Simons a free agent, Spencer Harris automatically getting the call as utility outfielder, unless he flivvers, and he showed in Sunday's game that he has great possibilities. Illness had held him back until given this chance against the Braves on the Sabbath.

While the baseball czar might have helped in removing Simons from consideration, he did the Nats no favor when he also ruled pitcher Guy Cantrell as free from any entanglements and ineligible to play with Washington, for this big pitcher was really showing ability and it is the mound staff which appears to be the team's only questionable department.

With Paul McCullough still at his home ill and Cantrell wished off the team, Johnson has but seven flingers in camp and he is finding this number far too small for his needs, with three slated to work games and the usual heavy demand for hurlers in the batting drills. In order to make up for this shortage it is likely that the Nats will hire two or three Tampa flingers to lob them over to the hitters and save the regulars as much as possible.

3-Step Lead Off First Base Is Taught by Milan.

The first real lesson in base-stealing was staged at this morning's workout and the "scholars" appeared much interested and quite apt in applying the ideas which Clyde Milan not only handed out, but demonstrated. Those forming the class were Ossie Bluege,

Goslin Signs Contract At Nocturnal Parley

Special to The Washington Post.

Tampa, Fla., March 18.—With bedtime rapidly approaching, President Clark Griffith, of the Nats, suddenly decided to talk salary terms with Outfielder Goose Goslin tonight and the two emerged from their conference near midnight with the information that Goslin had signed a contract for 1929.

As usual, no details were made known, but it was presumed that Goslin was given a small increase in recognition of his achieving the league batting championship last season.

Boxing Stages Comeback, Garden's Huge Gates Testify

By GEORGE KIRKSEY
(United Press Staff Correspondent).

NEW YORK, March 18 (U.P.).—Boxing has staged a successful financial comeback since the Gene Tunney-Tom Heeney fiasco at Yankee Stadium last July netted a loss of $150,000.

Innuendoes that the cauliflower industry is on the downgrade have been wiped out by Madison Square Garden's report that the last twenty boxing shows held in the Garden have grossed the amazing total of $1,025,891 at popular prices.

The biggest melon of the winter season promises to be sliced Friday night when Jimmy McLarnin, Irish boy from the far coast, battles Ray Miller, blond Chicago lightweight, in a scheduled ten-round return bout.

Evidence also comes from other fight centers that the game is far from on the wane. Jim Mullen's last four shows at Chicago have been sell-outs, the most recent being the Von Porat-Heeney affair.

Popular Prices, Well-Matched Fights Cause Boom.

The recent Jim Maloney-Tom Heeney bout at Boston attracted a capacity crowd of 20,000 to the Boston Garden. From Detroit comes word that boxing is enjoying unprecedented popularity in that area, largely because of the wise matchmaking of Dick Dunn and Scotty Montieth.

Floridans and winter vacationists paid almost half a million to see the Jack Sharkey-Young Stribling match at Miami Beach last month.

Popular prices, real well-matched fights and Tom McArdle, Garden matchmaker, are the principal reasons for the astounding success of boxing matches in the Garden during the last five months. McArdle, a nervous little Irishman who formerly was a piano finisher, believes as long as the prices are right and the matches produce action that boxing will continue to pack 'em in.

The receipts and prices for the Garden's last twenty bouts follow:

LIVERPOOL THRONGED FOR GRAND NATIONAL FRIDAY

Billy Barton Rounds Into Fine Form

60 Bars on Course to Cater to Thirst of Huge Crowd.

Easter Hero, Another American-Owned Entry, Favorite.

LIVERPOOL, England, March 18 (A. P.).—The rush to Liverpool for the historic Grand National Steeplechase on Friday already is on in earnest. Thousands of visitors, including scores of Americans descended on the city today.

Hotels have made unusual preparations to handle the crowds. One hostelry has arranged to serve 1,800 dinners on the night of the race. At Aintree, itself, where the course is located, arrangements have been made to serve 100,000 meals Friday, with 1,000 waiters and a small army of helpers engaged for the job.

No fewer than 60 bars will be provided on the course, several to be devoted exclusively to the sale of champagne.

Police Busy Tracing Source Of Counterfeit Coin.

Unusual vigilance will be exerted by the police in guarding the public. A large staff of detectives will be assigned to spot suspected thieves or sharpers. Already some counterfeit coin activity has been uncovered, raiders over the week-end locating a den where work on spurious money was in full blast.

The American homebred Billy Barton and American owned Easter Hero, two of the favorites for the Grand National, rounded into the final stretch of training in fine form. Howard Bruce's gelding galloped 3½ miles Saturday, pulling up fresh and well, greatly to the Baltimore owner's satisfaction.

Experts consider Billy Barton a better horse than he was at this time last year, as a result of additional time to become acclimated and better adaptability at the fences.

Whitney Horse Stronger Favorite Than Billy Barton.

Easter Hero, owned by J. H. Whitney, is an even greater favorite than Billy Barton. Mr. Whitney will pin his hopes on this entry alone, his trainer having decided not to start the other much-fancied horse, Maguelonne. Today Mr. Whitney said that with ordinary racing luck he looked to Easter Hero to win the classic.

The course is said to be in fine condition, considering the great amount of frost this winter. It was estimated 150,000 people, mainly from Liverpool, took advantage of the Sabbath holiday yesterday to inspect the track, its hedges, fences and water jumps.

BROWN NINE GATHERS.

The Brown A. C. Nine will hold a meeting for baseball tonight at the clubhouse at 8 o'clock. Officers will be elected and plans for the season will be discussed.

The Browns played under the name of the Stadium A. C. last year, in the unlimited class, and compiled an impressive record despite lateness of organization.

COLLYER'S COMMENT on the SPORT of KINGS

BY ROBERT F. COLLYER

SINGING the blues.

Horse players are kicking about the prices against all winners at all tracks. Good remedy is to wait until Bowie opens on April 2 and for Lexington and Jamaica. Tough times make tough people.

Give the boys a chance to stick in their arms—up to the elbow—and get even.

In addition to handing out Golden Prince as the Cofroth Handicap winner, your Uncle Bertram also selected seven of the fourteen successful ones at Tia Juana on Sunday. What's that? You say we were lucky—agree with you thoroughly—no argument. At the same time it's better to have a horse shoe than good sense. Ha, ha!

QUEEN TOWTON is going to drive down on the boys at Keeney Park this afternoon. Take what they offer you and consider it a good return on the amount invested.

RED CROSS PRINCESS is another hot tamale at this track. Plenty of wise kale showed up over night, so it appears as though the smart boys may have an ace in the hole.

Over at Jefferson Park LATCH KEY is going to graduate from the maiden ranks. If you hear a noise in the betting ring it will be "Trixie" Frigerio bombarding the "iron men" for Bob Maestri and others in close touch with the situation.

By the way, the chief of staff sends the happy chatter that MISS MEISE is going to knock EDWARD GRAY for a row of ash cans.

Out at Tia Juana "Fatty" Anderson, a guest of Normile and Coffroth, will have nine chances to grab off some negotiable.

I TOLD YOU is the real warm baby of the aft. String with the smart boys. More anon.

Joe Dundee Granted Largest Welter Purse

Boston, March 18 (A.P.).—Joe Dundee, welterweight champion, today signed a contract for Eddie Mack, boxing promoter at the Boston Garden, to defend his title here at Braves Field on June 24. Mack was authorized to name either Al Mello, Jackie Fields, Jimmy McLarnin or Young Jack Thompson as Dundee's opponent.

Mack said that Dundee demanded the largest guarantee ever given to a welterweight champion before agreeing to risk his crown.

The Boston promoter has not decided which challenger he will attempt to match with the champion. Mello, a Boston favorite, already has outpointed Dundee in a nontitle bout and will meet him in another such contest in the Boston Garden on April 12. If Mello again defeated Dundee, Mack said, he would be forced to give him an opportunity to fight for the title.

A. B. Thorne Elected New President of M. A. P.G.A.

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Md., March 18.—A. B. Thorne, of the Town and Country Club, of Washington, was today elected president of the Middle Atlantic Professional Golfers Association to succeed Charles Betschler, of the new Maryland Country Club.

Warner Mather, of the Woodholme Country Club, automatically advanced to the office of first vice president and J. Munroe Hunter, the Indian Spring pro, was chosen second vice president. A. F. Bergman, of Washington, retained the position of secretary for another year. Carroll MacMaster, of the Rolling Road Golf Club, and Bob Barrett, of the Chevy Chase Club, were named to assist Bergman in their respective territories.

A new office, that of treasurer, was created, and Betschler was elected to this office.

School Coaching Personnel Stable Over Long Period

LOCAL A. A. U. CHIEFS CLEAR PROTESTED BASKETERS

Banta, Krumm Maedonald Approved

Violations of Amateur Rules Not Regarded Serious.

Played With Pros, Is Charge of Potomac Boat Club.

WASHINGTON officials of the South Atlantic Amateur Athletic Union yesterday refused to disqualify three outstanding basket ball players in amateur ranks of the District after considering protests entered by the Potomac Boat Club a few hours before the players involved were to compete in the tournament games last night.

Ernest L. Spitzer, A. A. U. commissioner for Washington, and A. Earl Weeks, of the South Atlantic eligibility committee, ruled that Alfred Macdonald and William Banta, of the United Typewriter Grays, defending champions in the unlimited class, and Harold Krumm, of the Comets, would be permitted to play in the tournament conducted by The Washington Post despite the admission of minor infractions of the amateur code.

The Potomac Boat Club, a contender for unlimited honors charged that Banta, Macdonald and Krumm had violated the A. A. U. rules by playing against and with unregistered A. A. U. teams and by playing in company with recognized professional players.

Tardiness in Filing Protest Considered by Officials.

The tardiness of the Potomac Boat Club in registering the protest reacted in the favor of the accused players, a statement issued by Mr. Spitzer and Mr. Weeks declared. The good faith shown by the players since being warned of the violations also was taken into consideration by the officials whose statement follows:

The committee summoned Mr. Fones, the manager of the Typewriter Grays, and, after a thorough hearing, decided that the infractions of the rules were not serious enough to disqualify the team or any of its members. Particularly in view of the fact that the Typewriter Grays, refused to play a scheduled game with the Skinker Team after its attention was called to the fact that the latter team was a professional team. This refusal constituted, in the opinion of the committee an act of good faith and an indication of their desire to maintain its amateur standing.

"One of the controlling elements in reaching this decision was the fact that although the complete list of competitors was printed in The Washington Post on March 4 two weeks had elapsed before the committee received alleged proof of charges. The committee did not feel that it would act to the best interests of amateur athletics in the District to upset the splendid and minute work of organization accomplished by The Post at this late day, when the charges, even if proven, were errors of judgment rather than an unwillingness to comply with amateur rules."

LEAD OFF FIRST BASE IS TAUGHT BY MILAN

Buddie Myer, Sammy West, Jack Hayes and Red Barnes.

Milan spent much of his time convincing his class that they could take a lead of at least three full steps off first with safety, and he had "Uncle Nick" Altrock and Al Schacht in the box trying to pick them off to prove his point. Milan's lecture was quite logical. "If you can't get away fast you'll be caught at second," he said "so you might just as well be picked off first trying give yourself a chance. Study the pitcher's form and get the jump on him or you will never make it except by accident."

All were proficient in a return hook slide from a three-step lead by the time the lesson ended. The other "chapters" of the "book" will be learned daily from now on, Milan promising that by the time the Nats return to Washington they will be a constant threat on the bases.

Johnson Orders Day of Rest For Hard Workers.

"Take the lead even if you have no idea of stealing," Milan told his charges, "for this not only upsets the pitcher and catcher, but keeps the whole opposing infield looking for you to make the break and gives your own club a distinct advantage."

Two Pitchers to a Game Against Reds Is Johnson's Plan.

The Nationals play their next game at Clearwater Thursday, when they tackle the Brooklyn Robins. Johnson has named Lloyd Brown, Jim Weaver and Archie Campbell as his flingers. Goose Goslin will make his 1929 competitive debut in this contest.

Friday will be an idle day and from then on it will be simply one game after another for the Capital City Team.

The Cincinnati Reds will be here next Saturday and Sunday. Johnson is considering using only two flingers in Friday's game and continuing this plan throughout the remainder of the exhibition season.

New York scribes have been trying to put over a trade which would give the Yankees Catcher Bennie Tate in exchange for Outfielder Sam Byrd. Griffith and Johnson both declare that they have never either discussed or considered such a deal.

sident Lynch to relent and lift Magee's suspension.

Because of his reputation as an umpire baiter and because his last engagement as a player was terminated by the Milwaukee club for violations of training rules, President Heydler's appointment of Magee as an umpire surprised baseball men, but his work with the indicator vindicated Heydler's judgment. No player could put anything over on Umpire Magee. He was wise to all the tricks of umpire baiting, having pulled them all himself.

Kanawhas Reach Third Round, Eliminating Rockville.

The Kanawhas advanced to the third round by defeating the Rockville High Five, 47 to 27, in the 130-pound division. The game marked Rockville's debut in the tourney.

The play of Ben Polinger, Roger Leverton and Joe Rod featured for the Kanawhas. Polinger and Leverton scored the bulk of the points, while Rod fed the ball to both players. Polinger counted nine baskets for 18 points, while Leverton collected six fielders and three foul tosses for 15 points.

Dawson and Gandy were best for Rockville. Dawson hit the rims for five baskets and two foul shots for 12 points, while Gandy totaled 9.

The Kanawhas got off far in front in the first quarter to lead 8 to 1, but were pressed by the Rockvilles in the second quarter and led only by 11 to 7 at the half. After the intermission, however, they had an easy time of it.

Barry Features as French Co. Triumphs Over St. Martins.

In a 145-pound encounter the Howard A. French Co. eliminated its bitter rival, the St. Martin's Cardinals, 38 to 28, to advance to the second round. The game was much closer than the score indicates the Frenchs drawing away only in the last quarter. During the first three quarters play was of the nip-and-tuck variety with the Frenchs ahead only 20 to 19 at the half.

Barry's play featured the French's attack in the final quarter, while Gubisch's accurate eye aided. Gubisch rimmed six foul goals in six attempts. Webb and Anderson also played well.

For the St. Martins the two Ryan brothers, Max and Nell, were outstanding, while Keefer, the Dick Keefer of Business High School fame, made himself prominent always.

Roxies, Outweighted, Bow to J. C. C. Girls, 38 to 9.

The Roxie Gang were no match for the Jewish Community Center Sextet and were defeated, 38 to 9, in a girls' senior match. The vanquished club was outclassed, outgeneraled and outweighted, the latter fact having the strongest bearing on the final result.

Miee Eva Fishman, of the Community Center Team, featured with her uncanny ability to cage the ball from all angles, even when she was apparently completely guarded. Teresa Breen and Frances Kessler were the Roxie stars.

It was the Jewish Community Center Team's first appearance in the girls' tourney and many of the fans who had selected the Eagles because of their decisive victory over the Capital A. C. to win the final honors were of a different opinion after last night's contest. In one respect the Center Team surpassed the showing of the Eagles and that was in its passing game. The Basketeers also are to be reckoned with. The latter team scored an impressive victory over the Als last Friday.

Grays Score, Following Up Long Range Attack.

Before the largest crowd of the tournament games to date the United Typewriter Grays defeated the Comet A. C., 42 to 22, to advance to the third round.

The Grays inaugurated a new system in scoring last night which proved very effective as well as surprising. Instead of passing the ball around and working it under the basket to score, as has always been the case before, the players shot from long range and made good their "follow-ups" to count.

Buscher and Banta especially featured this style of play, and it was their combined work which enabled the Grays to get off to their usual lead.

"Dutch" Krumm kept the Comets in the running for a time during the early part by inserting a pair of baskets, while Moeller's floor work was out of the ordinary. Krumm, incidentally, played despite an infected elbow which he had wrapped carefully. At half time the Grays led, 23 to 10.

Potomac Boat Club Wins From Company E Five.

The Potomac Boat Club was given stiffer opposition by the Company E five than the score of 34-24 indicates. The Guards with Tom Sawyer as their chief threat, battled the Boatman on virtually even terms for two of the four periods. It was the domination of the second and third quarters by the Potomac that decided the issue.

Company E was ahead, 6 to 4, at the end of the first quarter but was trailing by nine points at the half and fifteen at the end of the third period.

The Boatmen exhibited their usual close guarding throughout the game and had a scoring threat in every position. Xanton led the Guards in field goals but it was the all-round play of Sawyer which stood out. Smith and Lilly tied for scoring honors on the Potomacs, each contributing four field goals.

Hefflefinger's 606 Set Tops Newspaper Scores

Phil Hefflefinger dropped 606 pins last night to contribute the most sensational bit of bowling in the newspaper men's duckpin tournament at King Pin, No. 1. But six survivors remain in both the championship and consolation flights.

Johnny Baum, defending champion, just managed to remain in the race. Dave McCarty, one of the strongest favorites, was eliminated.

The scores follow:

J. P. Hill had The Post led the consolation contestants with a 576 set. He and Robert H. Rebholz each recorded a 141 game in the consolation flight and Hefflefinger had a 151 count in the championship flight.

SONNENBERG BEATS M'CARTHY EASILY

for previously the preliminary wrestlers staged three rousing exhibitions. The best of them, and more exciting than the main bout, was the clash between "Rough House" Nelson, of Rochester, N. Y., and "Bull" Ricco, of Jersey City.

Joe Turner Is Outsmarted By Woods in Preliminary.

Nelson's rough tactics earned him the complete animosity of the crowd and his adversary, but he pinned Ricco with a top scissors and body weight in 12 minutes 30 seconds.

Joe Turner, old favorite of local fans, lost to Norman Woods, Southern middleweight champion, in a bout limited to 30 minutes. Woods, one of the smartest exponents of the ancient Greek pastime, threw Turner with a head lock in 19 minutes 20 seconds, and held his own throughout the remainder of the time.

Buddy Litchfield defeated Ray Augusterfer with an arm and body scissors in 10:30 after a lively session staged as the opener.

COLUMBIAN SIX SCORES.

The Columbia Sextet defeated the Epiphany Girls last night in a 24-to-18 game in the Hine Junior High School Gymnasium. The Columbians used many reserve players after tucking the game safely away in the first half. Mills, Collins and McChesney played well. Swight, Evans and McIntosh were impressive for Epiphany.

JEWISH RING TEAM WINS BY 3 TO 2

Goldman's Triumph Is Decisive in Bouts With K. of C.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS boxers made a valiant but futile bid last night to mar the undefeated record of the Jewish Community Center Team, the boys from the Sixteenth street club carrying off the honors by three bouts to two, before a capacity audience in Carroll Hall.

Seven bouts were fought but only five counted in the scoring, and the team decision did not rest with the Hebrew lads until the final bout of the night when Sam Goldman won the decision of the judges from McArdle. Even in this bout, the honors were equally distributed in the first two rounds, but Goldman won the third round by a clear margin.

Casey fighters won both of the non-scoring bouts, Billie Goodrich winning a decision from Anthony Draine in the 90-pound class, and Barry outpointed Gus Mirman of the Center in the welterweight division. Barry's victory was not counted because he was below the age limit of 17, the bout being staged merely as an exhibition.

Mike Tardugno Beats Barber In Extra-Round Battle.

The Tardugno brothers of the Jewish outfit put on only one-half of their act. Mike, a featherweight, fought and defeated Nevin Barber by decision in 4 rounds, but brother Angie scheduled bantamweight bout with Humphrey Decola did not...at alize owing to an injury to the latter in a baseball game yesterday afternoon.

Mike Tardugno had to step fast all the way to earn the judges' favor over his younger and less experienced rival. Barber mixed it willingly with him during the three regulaton rounds but wilted in the fourth and deciding stanza.

Jocko Miller, of the winning team, scored a one-round knockout over Hugh Beckett in the 145-pound bout. Beckett's jaw collided with one of Miller's lightning thrusts and the Casey boxer collapsed.

A knockout of the technical variety went to the Caseys in the 140-pound class when Leo Coveleskis pounded Seymour Kritt into a dazed condition in the third round. The summaries:

90 pounds—Goodrich (K. C.) defeated Draine (unattached), decision, 3 rounds.

112 pounds—Harris (K. C.) defeated Nathanson (J. C. C.), decision, 3 rounds.

126 pounds—M. Tardugno (J. C. C.) defeated Barber (K. C.), decision, 4 rounds.

140 pounds—Coveleskie (K. C.) defeated Kritt (J. C. C.), technical knockout, third round.

145 pounds—Miller (J. C. C.) defeated Beckett (K. C.), knockout, first round.

147 pounds—Barry (K. C.) defeated Mirman (J. C. C.), decision, 3 rounds.

160 pounds—Goldman (J. C. C.) defeated McGardie (K. C.), decision, 3 rounds.

CAPITOL SEXTET PLAYS.

The Capital A. C. Sextet engages the Indianhead Six tonight in the Wilson Normal Gymnasium at 8 o'clock. This is a return game, Indianhead having been beaten earlier in the season.

Tomorrow night the American Security & Trust Co. Sextet will be met in the Central High School Gymnasium at 8 o'clock. Dancing will follow this game.

INSTEAD of exercise

Don't suffer the consequences of persistent lack of exercise. Learn the simple secret of the exerciser in the vest-pocket box for a dime! Millions know it!

Cascarets make bilious, headachy, constipated people feel wonderful. Their effect is not only quick, but it's lasting. They give the bowels as much real exercise as they get from an hour in the saddle.

Oils, salts and ordinary laxatives do not act like Cascarets. These things produce only mechanical or chemical action. They actually weaken the bowels. You have to keep dosing with them.

Each time you use Cascarets, your bowels become stronger. They are made from Cascara Sagrada, which stimulates the natural peristaltic action of the bowel muscles. Nothing else does this. That accounts for the popularity of Cascarets and their tremendous sales of over 20 million packages a year!

We had dinner with a prize fighter

We were surprised to watch him eat jelly

WE HAD dinner recently with a famous prize fighter—one of the big fellows noted the world over for his perfect fighting physique. We were interested in seeing what he would eat. We heard him tell one of the waiters to bring a glass of jelly. Before the meal was over, the great fighter cleaned up more than half of that glass of jelly.

That was a practical eye-opener as to the energy value of sugar. The active body of this man craved and needed sweets.

Normal children also are athletes and their energy-consuming bodies hunger for and need sweets. All people whose daily work is of an exhausting, physical nature hunger for and need sweets.

And all others need sugar as an appetizing agent. Sugar develops the flavor of health-giving cereals, of fruits and of vegetables, of milk in milk shakes, and of eggs in egg-nog.

Every grocery store carries pure jams, jellies and preserves, and enough canned fruits and vegetables to bring health to every table. The Sugar Institute.

Before and After Childbirth

"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before my first baby was born and I am taking it now for my weakened condition after the birth of my second boy. Although I never have put on any flesh I am feeling good now and the Vegetable Compound has helped me in every way. It is surely a wonderful medicine and I will be glad to answer letters for I recommend it highly."—Mrs. Fred W. Davey, Madison, Kansas.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION
Ruddy checks—sparkling eyes—most women can have. Dr. F. M. Edwards for 20 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave his patients a substitute for calomel made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. Know them by their olive color.
These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.
If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edward's Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.
Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—now and then to keep fit. 15c, 30c and 60c.

SPECULATORS SHIFT TO BANKS FOR LOANS

Movement Is Laid to High Rates and Wider Margins Asked by Brokers.

STOCKS REMAIN STEADY

By ROBERT C. ALBRIGHT.

A shift from brokers to banks on the part of borrowers holding securities for investment or for speculation, is seen by the Federal Reserve Board in the decrease evidenced in bank loans during the four weeks from February 6 to March 6, it was disclosed in the March bulletin of the board, made public yesterday.

This shift, concludes the board, may have been due in part to the increasingly high rates and wide margins demanded by brokers from their customers. There was, in fact, an increase in the total of security loans by reporting member banks in leading cities, notwithstanding the decrease in brokers' loans by these banks. Total security loans of the reporting member banks at the end of February were larger than at any previous time, and more than $1,000,000,000 above the level of a year ago.

Reduction in the total of brokers' loans during the four weeks ending March 6 was $22,000,000, this decrease representing the net result of an increase of $1,000,000 in loans for New York banks for their own account and a decrease of $224,000,000 in loans for account of out-of-town banking correspondents, offset to the extent of $202,000,000 by an increase in loans for account of foreign and nonbanking lenders.

The board notes that in recent weeks the entire decline has been in loans for out-of-town banks, the reduction in street loans by banks outside of New York City being general throughout the country. During the same period loans to brokers by nonbanking lenders continued to increase, and this increase, says the board, offset a considerable part of the decline in brokers' loans by banks.

New Offices Are Opened.

Two New York brokerage houses opened new offices in Washington yesterday. In the case of one, Harriss & Vose, yesterday's opening of remodeled quarters in the Southern Building marked the establishment of a branch of the firm in this city. The other, F. B. Keech & Co., who formerly maintained offices at 1510 H street northwest, observed the removal of their local headquarters to the Metropolitan Club Building, Seventeenth and H streets northwest.

The new quarters of F. B. Keech & Co., occupy the entire Seventeenth street side of the ground floor of the building. The board room is spacious, and the stock board is one of the largest in the city. The translux is located above and at the center of this. In offices on the right of the board-room are the bookkeepers, cashiers and operators. In the rear of the board-room is another room of equal size, with desks fitted with separate tickers for the accommodation of customers. The bond and investment departments are located in this part of the offices. The commodities department is in the large bay window on the Seventeenth street side.

In addition to this main office, F. B. Keech & Co. will continue its office in the Carlton Hotel, which is in charge of William Morrow. George A. Garrett is resident partner of the firm.

R. T. Harriss Attends Opening.

The new branch of Harriss & Vose, which opened yesterday at 807 Fifteenth street northwest, in the Southern Building, is in charge of McElroy Moss and E. Jackson Emrich. Richard T. Harriss, head of the firm and a former president of the New York Cotton Exchange, was here for the opening. Charles Clarendon, head of the company's securities department, also came down from New York.

Furnished throughout in walnut, with partitions of the same material, the new offices are conveniently arranged and attractively decorated. Back of a broad entrance are two conference rooms for customers, and in the rear of this is the board room, with all modern brokerage facilities. Next to the boardroom are offices for the staff, and to the rear of these is located a boardroom exclusively for women customers, under the management of Miss Rosalie H. Dilli.

Joint Meeting to Be Held.

Members of the District of Columbia Bankers' Association and the Bond Club of Washington will meet jointly with the Advertising Club of Washington today at the National Press Club, where Francis H. Sisson, vice president of the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, will deliver a luncheon address before the combined group, on the present trend of business, it is announced by Ernest Johnson, president of the Advertising Club.

Mr. Sisson, who directs publicity, advertising and public relations activities for his institution, organized and was five years chairman of the public relations committee of the American Bankers Association. He has been president of the trust company division of the association, and chairman of the publicity committee. Previous to his association with the Guaranty Trust Co. he was active in railroad circles, as assistant chairman of the advisory committee of the Association of Railway Executives. For his war activities he was made a chevalier of the Order of the Crown by the King of Belgium.

Prices Remain Steady.

Steadiness of prices was evidenced in a modest turnover of securities on the Washington Stock Exchange yesterday. Gains over last sales quotations were noted in Riggs National Bank, which sold at 573; Chevy Chase Dairy preferred, 110; Washington Railway & Electric preferred, 98. Holding at recent levels were Potomac Electric 5½ per cent preferred, 108¾; Mergenthaler Linotype, 107½; Union Trust Co., 351. After opening at 99¾, Capital Traction broke at 99⅝ after call.

Reserve Board Statement.

The Federal Reserve Board's condition statement of weekly reporting member banks in 101 leading cities on March 13 shows an increase for the week of $90,000,000 in net demand deposits, and decreases of $16,000,000 in time deposits, of $40,000,000 in borrowings and of $8,000,000 in investments. There was an increase of $10,000,000 in loans.

New Debentures Offered.

Harris, Forbes & Co. and Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc., are making offering today of a new issue of $35,000,000 5 per cent debentures with class A common stock purchase warrants, of Eastern Utilities Investing Corporation, which is engaged primarily in the business of acquiring and holding for long term investment, securities deriving their income from public utility and allied enterprises.

Fenner & Beane announce public offering today of an issue of $4,000,000 15-year 6 per cent gold debentures, with stock purchase warrants, of the Southern National Corporation, formed by them with broad powers to buy, hold, sell and underwrite securities and to participate in underwritings and in syndicates generally. The Southern National Co. is an investment trust of the management type, and the Fiscal Management Corporation has subscribed $1,000,000 for the initial issue of 12g stock.

Backed By Our Nationally Advertised Pledge

$695.00 Each

Exceptionally fine cars offered at this price, to make room for the large number of trades we are accepting on the PRESIDENT "8"—the COMMANDER "6" and "8"—the DICTATOR and ERSKINE MODELS.

OUR PLEDGE

1. Every used car is conspicuously marked with its price in plain figures, and that price, just as the price of our new cars, is rigidly maintained.
2. All Studebaker automobiles which are sold as CERTIFIED CARS have been properly reconditioned, and carry a 30-day guarantee for replacement of defective parts and free service on adjustments.
3. Every purchaser of a used car may drive it for five days, and then, if not satisfied for any reason, turn it back and apply the money paid as a credit on the purchase of any other car in stock—new or used. (It is assumed that the car has not been damaged in the meantime).

3 Philippine Officials Leave Manila for U. S.

Notice of departure of high Philippine government officials from Manila Sunday for the United States was radioed to the War Department yesterday, the message announcing the journey of Speaker and Mrs. Roxas, Secretary of Agriculture and Natural Resources Alunan and his daughter, and Commissioner-elect and Mrs. Osias and family aboard the S. S. President McKinley.

The visit of Speaker Roxas is presumably to present petitions regarding Philippine affairs to Congress; that of Secretary Alunan is in the interest of agricultural promotion and economic development in the Philippines, and that of Commissioner-elect Osias for the purpose of entering on his duties as newly appointed resident commissioner in this country.

STATEMENT OF THE CONDITION OF TH

GIRL IS FOUND DEAD IN BATHROOM AFTER MYSTERIOUS VISIT

Ruth Myers, 23, Student, Lies Lifeless on Floor—Note Reads "I'm Sorry."

Three Women Called Upon Her on Veiled Mission, Police Learn in Inquiry.

Following an afternoon visit of three mysterious women whom she apparently did not wish to face, Miss Ruth Myers, 23-year-old student, was found dead early last night in the locked bathroom of her apartment at 130 East Capitol street.

The door of the bathroom was locked from the inside at the time Miss Myers died, according to police. The door was forced in by Arthur A. Clagett, tenant of a room in the same apartment.

Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt reported that he found a bottle in the cabinet of the bathroom bearing traces of poison. He will conduct an autopsy this morning at the John T. Rhines Undertaking Co.

Sorry, Says Note.

Clutched in the hand of the girl was a scrap of paper bearing the scrawled words, "I am sorry—sorry." From all appearances she was attempting to continue the note as she died. Ink from an open fountain pen had stained her fingers and the blouse of the blue dress she wore. The repeated word, "sorry" was hardly readable.

Coroner Nevitt, basing his opinion on the presumption that the girl took poison, believes that she had time to place the bottle in the cabinet before beginning the note, and then collapsed.

The last seen of the girl by neighbors was about 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when, according to a report given police, three women appeared at the apartment and asked for Miss Myers. She came to the door and after answering to her name slammed the door in the faces of the three callers, according to the story given police.

Threatened by Visitors.

One of the visiting women was heard to say, police were told, that the girl might get out a back way. Another of the women is said to have expressed the opinion that this was not possible. Then the third woman is quoted as saying, "Well, we'll have to get out a warrant for her."

The reason for the girl's death is connected by police with this mysterious visit. Officers have not learned who the three visitors were.

A sister of Miss Myers, Mrs. William H. Spignul, was unable to discuss the tragedy last night. The girl's father, George W. Myers, died about a year ago. He left the girl enough money for a comfortable living, it is said. Miss Myers spent much of her time at the Congressional Library, reading history, biography and fiction. She was formerly employed at the Navy Department.

Blow School Opposed As Colored Institution

Opposition to any proposition by the administration of public schools looking toward assignment of the Blow School at Twentieth street and Benning road northeast, to divisions 10-13, of colored schools, was expressed last night by the Public Interest Association of Northeast Washington, which met in the Parish Hall of the Calvary Protestant Episcopal Church. The school was declared to be unfit, from a sanitary standpoint, for occupancy by any group of children.

Nominations made by a volunteer poll committee for memberships on the Public Utilities Commission, after protracted discussion, were laid on the table. The association took the position that any other action taken by them would be tantamount to indorsing action of the committee in volunteering to submit a poll to civic associations, as well as an indorsement of the nominations submitted by them.

Jury Says Conductor Was Killed in Accident

Philip Handley, 48-year-old conductor at the Washington Terminal Yard, met his death Sunday night as the result of an accident while backing a train out of the station, according to the verdict of the coroner's jury that investigated yesterday.

Handley is said to have leaned out from behind a coach to give a signal as the train was backing down track No. 1, and as he did so his head struck against a parlor car on the next track. He was taken to the emergency room at the Union Station and pronounced dead. The conductor is survived by the wife, a daughter, Laura, and a niece, Thelma.

25 AERO TOURISTS REACH HERE TODAY

Ruth Nichols Heads Group Fostering Growth of Aviation Clubs.

WILL VISIT 38 STATES

Some 25 members of the Long Island Aviation Country Club, headed by Ruth Nichols, well-known Rye, N. Y., aviatrix, are expected to arrive at Bolling Field this morning about 11 o'clock on the first stop of a country-wide tour in the interest of national aviation clubs. They will be met at the field by F. Trubee Davison, Assistant Secretary of War for Aviation.

Shortly after leaving the field, Miss Nichols and her entourage will go to Carlton Hotel for lunch. The group will include a number of well-known fliers, among them being Miss Amelia Barnhart, flying a DeHaviland Moth, and Miss Dorothy Bob, piloting a Bellanca. In the party will be George M. Pynchon, jr., flying a Huskie, Jr.; James B. Taylor, jr., in a Lookheed-Vega; George B. Post, flying an Avro-Avian; Arnold Dickinson, flying a Sikorsky amphibian; Edward O. McDonnell, in a Curtiss Falcon Harold Waterworth Holbrook Smith, Earl Osborn, Henry White, C. Olivar, C. Olivar O'Donnell, Mr. and Mrs. John Duncan and others.

Guests at the luncheon from Washington will include Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune, former commandant of the Marine Corps; Maj. Gen. James E. Fechet and Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, who are to be made honorable members of the Aviation Country Clubs by Miss Nichols; former Postmaster General Harry S. New, David S. Ingalls, Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Aeronautics; W. Irving Glover, Second Assistant Postmaster General; Commander John H. Towers, Col. C. deF. Chandler, Maj. Thomas Milling, Porter Adams, Col. Paul Henderson, Col. A. B. Barber, Walter Bruce Howe, Maj. Delos Emmons and Lieut. Lester J. Maitland.

After leaving Washington, Miss Nichols will make a tour of the country in an effort to sell the idea of aviation clubs to other cities. This plan has been most successful in England, where numbers of persons have been enabled to learn flying.

On her flight around the country, which is expected to cover 12,000 miles in 38 States, Miss Nichols will use a Curtiss Fledgling loaned her for the occasion. She will be accompanied by Robb C. Certel and a mechanic in a Curtiss Robin monoplane.

Officers and Veterans Honor Maj. Gen. Fries

Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, chief of the chemical warfare service, United States Army, was the guest of honor yesterday afternoon on his fifty-sixth birthday at an anniversary luncheon at the Arlington Hotel, given by the National Patriotic Council.

Representative Albert Johnson, of Washington; Admiral R. C. Koontz, Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune, United States Marine Corps, and numerous other officers were present. Maj. Gen. Fries and J. E. Yaden, District department commander of the Spanish War Veterans, spoke.

Cycle Policeman Hurt By Collision With Car

Policeman Joseph Cominsky, 27 years old, of the Fourth Precinct, received minor injuries yesterday afternoon when his motor cycle was in collision with a Washington Railway & Electric Co street car at Eleventh and T streets northwest.

The injured policeman was removed to Emergency Hospital in the patrol wagon of his precinct and treated by Dr. Leon Gordon for bruises of the arm and abrasions. Jacob Malawista was the motorman of the car, police report.

Haste to Reach Club Results in 2 Arrests

Police of the Thirteenth Precinct last night spent a busy half hour in chasing speeding automobiles carrying young ladies and their escorts to the Manor Club, near Norbeck, Md., and their efforts resulted in the arrest of a college student who was charged with reckless driving and that of a dentist who was charged with speeding.

In placing a charge of reckless driving against John Aloysius McCarthy, 24-year-old Georgetown University student, Policeman A. H. Pool said McCarthy's automobile sped past him on Sixteenth street at more than 60 miles an hour. McCarthy's arrest followed when he was forced to stop at the end of Sixteenth street northwest. He was released without collateral to appear in court this morning.

Dr. Henry Spillan, 41 years old, of 3525 Davenport street northwest, was charged with speeding at 34 miles an hour on Sixteenth street when arrested by Policemen R. N. White and W. M. Sanders. He was released on $15 collateral. Both McCarthy and Dr. Spillan said they were in a hurry to get to the Manor Club party.

Services Are Held For Ivan C. Weld

Commerce Chamber Head Is Given Burial in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Final rites for Ivan C. Weld, 55 years old, president of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, who died last Friday, were held yesterday afternoon at the residence at Sandy Spring, Md. The Rev. M. R. Lovell, pastor of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, officiated. Burial was in Rock Creek Cemetery.

The services were attended by directors and members of the Washington Chamber and members of the Board of Trade. Loss to the city in the death of Mr. Weld was expressed in resolutions adopted by the directors of the Chamber of Commerce. In addition to being active in civic affairs he was an executive of the Chestnut Farms Dairy. He was connected with that concern for sixteen years.

Out of respect to the memory of Mr. Weld the March meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, planned for tonight, will be postponed until the third Tuesday in April, at which time the March and April programs will be combined.

Former Representative Eugene J. Hainer Dead

News was received in Washington yesterday of the death in Omaha, Nebr., of Eugene J. Hainer, former representative in Congress from Nebraska.

Mr. Hainer was an unsuccessful candidate for reelection to Congress in 1896. He had served as a representative for a number of years up to that time. He was a native of Hungary and emigrated to this country with his parents in 1854.

SERVICES FOR F. X. MEYERS.

Representative of Furniture Concern to Be Buried This Morning.

Funeral services for Francis X. Meyers, 71 years old, an employe for 40 years of the firm of House & Herrmann, furniture dealers, who died Sunday, will be held at 9 o'clock this morning in St. Martin's Catholic Church. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Meyers was an outside representative of House & Hermann. He was a member of the Washington Lodge of Elks. He is survived by two brothers, who live in New York.

CRITICISM RESENTED BY TAXICAB DRIVERS

Handling of Public Vehicles in Capital Defended in Protests to Post.

RIGID TRAINING IS CITED

Exception was taken by certain taxicab drivers yesterday to the article by William Ullman, automobile editor of The Washington Post, as published in Monday's issue of The Post under the heading "Reckless Driving by Taxi Men Held Menace in Capital."

Representing a committee of drivers for the Black and White Taxicab Co., D. H. Cave declared "We consider Mr. Ullman's criticism an unjust injury as it will cause the public to lose faith in us without any real cause." Mr. Cave continued:

"Every new driver employed by the Black and White company is trained before being allowed on the street. The company does not tolerate any man who drives recklessly, or any one who disobeys the police regulations in any other way.

"Drivers are cautioned daily and notices are posted each day urging the drivers to cooperate in every way with the police and public. Fully 90 per cent of the Police Department will agree that our cab drivers are better drivers than the average private driver."

Letter Denies Charges.

Richard K. James, a Diamond cab driver, addressed to Mr. Ullman at The Post a letter in which he discussed the several charges brought in the writer's article.

"Since buying my copy of The Post this morning," Mr. James said, "I have read and reread your article trying to ascertain whether or not you were sane or merely prejudiced against the taxi drivers. Personally, after a thorough analysis of your article, I am convinced that you are entirely ignorant of the subject on which you wrote.

"Taxi drivers are justified in their confidence in their ability to handle cars and let me state—if every driver of an auto in the City of Washington could handle and drive a car under every driving condition as skilfully and carefully as the Washington taxi drivers, there would be no accidents and no casualties. A broad statement, but true nevertheless."

Drivers' Tests Are Cited.

Taking up, one by one, the accusations brought in Mr. Ullman's article, Mr. James endeavored, he said, "to show you and our public that you are all wet." The cab driver was said in the article "to be broadly accused of" double parking, turning between street intersections, "jumping" signal lights and other offenses.

After declaring that cab drivers "must pass a severe test before being permitted to leave the garage in charge of a public vehicle," the Diamond man said, "in closing, let me say that before you write another such article please know your subject and don't write things that will be detrimental to the well being and means of livelihood of your fellow men, even the lowly 'hacker'."

Esch, Farrell Honored By Commission Group

Commissioner Patrick J. Farrell and former Commissioner John J. Esch, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, were guests of the In-Com-Co Club at a reception last night at the Mayflower Hotel. Approximately 1,800 persons attended.

Commissioner Farrell was welcomed to the commission by Ernest I. Lewis, chairman. Mr. Esch was given a gold watch as a token of the esteem in which employes of the bureau hold him. After the dinner, guests danced.

FUNERAL OF DR. J. F. MORAN.

Services for Physician, Long Instructor at Georgetown, Held Yesterday.

Funeral services for Dr. John F. Moran, 64 years old, who died Saturday at the residence, 2426 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, were held yesterday in St. Stephen's Catholic Church. Burial was in Holy Rood Cemetery.

Dr. Moran was a native of this city and for 35 years was associated with the Georgetown Medical School, holding a number of prominent positions. He was known as an educator and writer, as well as physician. He was credited with being the first man to use motion pictures in instructing medical students.

RITES FOR J. E. M'CUSKER.

Funeral of Retired Construction Chief at Annapolis to Be Tommorrow.

Funeral services for John E. McCusker, 80 years old, for 30 years connected with construction work at the United States Naval Academy, who died yesterday in Annapolis, will be held at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in St. Anne's Episcopal Church, Annapolis.

At the time of his retirement a few years ago, Mr. McCusker was superintendent of construction at the Naval Academy. He is survived by four sons and three daughters.

HAZARDOUS DRIVING OF BIG BUSES STIRS WRATH OF CITIZENS

Complaint General of Road Hogging, Speeding and Blocking Crossways.

REVISION OF SCHEDULES HELD VITAL FOR SAFETY

Operators Are Also Accused of Going on Amber Light and Cutting Corners.

By WILLIAM ULLMAN.

Buses as a factor in Washington's traffic disorder again are drawing unfavorable criticism. Improved a short time ago under the closer scrutiny of their employers, the police, and a resentful public opinion, many of these drivers today stand accused of slipping back into tactics that cause trepidation and irritation and create a genuine menace to safety.

Recognizing that buses have schedules to keep and that they serve a significantly large number of the population, and conceding the sincere desire of company executives and many drivers to abide by the rules of safe driving, many observers nevertheless are convinced that conditions again compel the spotlight.

Taking advantage of their vehicle's size to bully their way through the ranks of motorists and pedestrians is an accusation laid at the door of many drivers, not only of intracity and sightseeing buses, but also of those operating over city routes.

Other charges of misbehavior include:

Other Offenses Alleged.

Middle-of-the-street driving at a slow pace that forces private car traffic to remain behind or go to the right or beyond the center of the street in passing.

Blocking cross-walks and otherwise ignoring the rights of pedestrians.

Cutting corners at hazardous speed.

Racing the automatic signal lights and starting on the amber.

Failure to use established zones for picking up or discharging passengers, even where the excuse of being blocked by parked cars is lacking.

Recognizing The Post's interest in traffic safety, numerous responsible citizens have cited instances of these and other forms of misbehavior on the part of bus drivers. Beyond this, the writer and other members of The Post staff have seen with their own eyes evidence of misdemeanors that merit the attention of those charged with the enforcement of the traffic regulations.

Take Advantage of Size.

In almost any part of the city it is possible to note the tendency of bus drivers to take advantage of the size of the vehicles they operate. Through lines of pedestrians they proceed at undiminished pace. At corners, where they are turning, they seem to ignore the basic rule of safety, the right-of-way regulation which gives through traffic precedence over that which is changing its course.

Not only is this the case in some instances where the turn is to the right and the pace necessarily is slow enough to diminish the hazard, but in making left turns, where the sweep is sufficiently wide to permit of a higher and a dangerous speed.

At one intersection, where a stop sign commands cross traffic to halt, it is not uncommon to see a large bus swing across the thoroughfare in front of a heavy stream of oncoming traffic. That there are no more accidents as a result of this practice, observers explain as due to the fact that the private vehicle operator has been thoroughly intimidated out of the rights that are conferred upon him by the traffic regulations.

Hazards Increased by Ire.

The practice is one, however, that impels the other street users to forms of resistance and revenge that make for constant and hazardous conflict between the various elements of traffic.

Road-hogging is one of the most common and irritating of their offenses, to judge from the observations of the writer and the protests of private car operators.

In Washington and on the highways just outside of the city this form of misbehavior is especially noticeable on thoroughfares where grades are somewhat long and steep. In the northwest section of the city, where the topography is rolling, three thoroughfares carry an especially heavy volume of traffic. On all of them, buses operate and instances in which the driver of the slow-moving, heavy vehicle retards the faster private cars are especially noticeable.

Unable to get past legally, private vehicle drivers obviously become impatient. In this state of mind, they show themselves prone to take dangerous chances, either by passing on the right in a weaving traffic stream or cutting far over on the thoroughfare in order to pass at the left.

In many such instances the bus driver lacks the old alibi that parked cars force him to remain out from the right curb for, in the area of congestion, the law clears the curb for him. In one particular case of this character, on the longest of grades in the city, there is no parking throughout its entire length. Yet, buses often can be observed "hogging" the area that would permit other vehicles to pass safely.

One of the causes of complaint that the pedestrian makes against the bus is that it robs him of his safe passage at many an intersection. In discharging passengers, to cite one common complaint, the bus frequently is stopped upon the crosswalk painted on the pavement. The pedestrian, thus, is forced to walk in front of the bus or behind it. In the former case, he charges, scant opportunity to proceed safely is given by the driver, impatient to get his cumbersome vehicle under way.

At one downtown intersection where buses ply their way in considerable number during the rush hour, literally hundreds of walkers are discommoded and endangered as the lumbering vehicles, racing two and sometimes three abreast on the one-way street, cut sharply to the left around a corner. The intersection is one of the worst in the city.

Schedule Should Be Changed.

An effort to keep a close schedule is recognized as the impelling motive behind another of the charges against bus drivers, namely, racing the signal lights and starting on the amber light. It is argued in connection with this deviation from the rule of safe driving that if schedules are so close as to force drivers to resort to practices of this kind, they might better be changed in the interest of safety.

It is conceded that this array of accusations is not directed against all bus drivers or even a majority of them. It also is admitted that their employers are interested in safety and in seeing that their drivers conform to the rules of good driving and common courtesy to other street users.

The lapses from these standards on the part of the conspicuous minority of their employes, however, are regarded as calling for summary action at this time, when Washington stands on the threshold of its greatest driving season.

JUROR, ILL, DELAYS MRS. HORNER'S TRIAL

Burlingame-Blalock and Edna Gray Cases to Follow Drug Prosecution.

WOMAN UNDER BIG BAIL

Resumption of the trial of Mrs. Lorraine Horner, pretty young wife of Stanley Horner, prominent local automobile distributor, on charges of forging and uttering five prescriptions for narcotics, was delayed yesterday in the District Supreme Court until today due to illness of one of the jurors.

Assistant District Attorney William H. Collins, in charge of the prosecution, is awaiting completion of the trial before taking up two other matters—completion of presenting the Burlingame-Blalock case to the grand jury and trial of Edna Gray, colored, on a charge of performing an illegal operation.

The Government's case against Mrs. Horner probably will be concluded today. Thus far the prosecution has obtained testimony from Dr. M. C. Dollman, who prescribed for the pretty defendant, that the prescriptions for narcotics were altered. The prosecution has yet to trace the alleged forgery to Mrs. Horner, as no testimony or evidence has been thus far advanced directly implicating her. The defense is being conducted by John H. Burnett and Milton King.

The grand jury already has heard Mrs. Helen F. Blalock's story—the same which she told to the special Police Trial Board which acquitted Capt. Guy E Burlingame of charges of unbecoming conduct.

Upon completion of these two cases Collins intends to bring Edna Gray, colored, of 430 Rhode Island avenue northwest, to trial. In the last seven years she has been indicted eight times on charges ranging from first-degree murder to performing illegal operations. She never faced trial on any of the charges and is at liberty under a total bail of $45,000. In the coming trial she is charged with performing an illegal operation on Miss Hazel Hardy, of Clarendon, Va.

CITIZENS ASK POLICE CHIEF BY PROMOTION

Lincoln Park and West End Groups' Resolutions Urge Man From Ranks.

LATTER NAMES NEW HEAD

Selection of a Chief of Police to succeed Maj. Edwin B. Hesse from the personnel of the department was advocated at their regular meeting last night by the Lincoln Park Citizens Association, at the Bryan School, and the West End Citizens Association, at the Western Presbyterian Church.

Charles L. Norris was elected president of the West End Association to succeed J. F. Jones, who resigned on moving from the territory covered by the association. William McK. Clayton and William A. Roberts were indorsed for membership on the Public Utilities Commission.

Dr. George C. Havenner, chairman of the Citizens Advisory Council and president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, spoke on "Organized Citizenship" at the Lincoln Park meeting. He urged that strict regulations be made requiring medical examination of all persons entering the proposed new public swimming pools.

"Never!" he said, speaking of a suggestion that a pool be built in Anacostia Park. "I am absolutely, literally and unalterably opposed to these disease-bearing, open swimming pools, where men and women can go without medical examination. More sinus and eye and ear trouble is prevalent when they are open than at any other time of year. The chlorine used is insufficient to kill the germs. I think, and a number of leading physicians think, that no one should be allowed to go into them without medical examination."

Dr. Havenner also spoke of progress in paving projects, saying that more money has been spent for paving in the Southeast and Northeast sections of the District in the last two years than in the preceding fifteen years.

He cited the pledge of young men of Athens in Hellenic days, in which they promised to respect their city "and to incite a like respect in those above them, who are prone to annul the laws or to set them at nought," as an example which District residents "might well follow."

Henry E. King, a member of the Brightwood Citizens Association, urged the Lincoln Park Association to indorse Clayton as candidate for the Public Utilities Commission. The question of indorsement was deferred until the next meeting.

A resolution commending President Hoover for retaining Col. U. S. Grant 3d as superintendent of Public Buildings, Parks and Grounds, was passed and will be sent to the President. A new member, Mrs. Elizabeth O'Neal, of 1344 B street southeast, was admitted.

Ten Cases of Whisky Seized in Maryland

Maryland State police late last night captured a small automobile containing ten cases of whisky on Craine highway near Marlboro.

John Sweeny, who said he lived in Washington, the driver, was arrested on a charge of transportation and possession. Justice of the Peace Gore fixed his bond at $1,000.

JONES ACT THREAT WANES AS 91 FACE COURT AS 'DRUNKS'

Rum Apparently Plentiful in District During the Week-End.

BUYERS AND SELLERS LOSING FEAR OF LAW

Several Plead Guilty and Get Sentences or Fines for Having Liquor.

Records at Police Court yesterday revealed not only evidence that liquor was plentiful over the week-end, but also that the sellers and buyers of it have lost the fear which beset them when the Jones liquor felony law was enacted.

With the filing of 91 cases of intoxication and 17 charges of violations of the dry law, ten of which were listed under the Jones law, court attaches experienced one of the busiest days since prohibition went into effect.

Seven of the accused Jones law violators were bound over to the grand jury by Judge Isaac R. Hitt, who allowed continuances in the other three cases.

Held Under Jones Law.

The seven are Norman Goodwin, of 714 Morton street northwest, transportation and possession, $3,500 bail; Matilda di Dominico, 423 Eleventh street northwest, sale, $2,500 bail; Maud Hill, colored, 934 Third street southwest, third offense, sale, $3,000 bail; John Hansford, colored, 328 G street northeast, sale, $2,000 bail; Earl Glover, 1717 Oregon avenue northwest; Bertha Brown, 4 Alexander's court northwest, and Louise Grant, 8 Alexander's court, all colored, transportation, $2,500 bail each.

Four persons pleaded guilty and two others were convicted of possession charges. They were subjected to severe penalties. John Thornton, 1533 Ninth street northwest; Clara Croxton, 510 Second street southwest; Elizabeth Wilson, 512 Second street southwest, and Jack Brown, 104 Four-and-a-half street southwest, all colored, pleaded guilty and each was fined $100, with an alternative of 30 days in jail.

Two Men Convicted.

Lawrence Miles, colored, was fined $100 or 30 days and Fred Williams, colored, $200 or 60 days after trial on possession charges.

Arraignments were postponed in the cases of Ruth Landon, colored, charged with third-offense possession; George R. Kelly, 909 Fourth street northwest, charged with sale, and Albert Harper, colored, of Chain Bridge road, charged with transportation.

An average fine of $10 with a few small jail sentences were meted out for convictions of intoxication by Judge Ralph Given.

Woman Asks $10,000; Says Truck Struck Her

Mary Spector, 640 Fifteenth street northeast, charging she was injured as the result of negligence, instituted suit for $10,000 damages yesterday in the District Supreme Court against the Action Fuel Co., Inc., of 911 South Capitol street.

While she was crossing Fifth street and Massachusetts avenue northwest on last January 21, she declared, a truck of the company, driven in a negligent manner, struck and severely injured her. Attorneys Joseph L. Tapper and David L. Blanken appeared for the plaintiff.

Rejection Urged Of Bid for School

Citizens' Group Makes Vain Appeal to Ladue on Burrville Addition.

A conference was held yesterday by the engineer commissioner, William B. Ladue, with the municipal architect, A. L. Harris, and a committee of the Northeast Boundary Civic Association with reference to plans for the eight-room addition to the Burrville School, for which bids were opened recently.

The committee contended for use of the entire $180,000 appropriated by Congress for the building, instead of acceptance of the bid of $139,000. Through H. D. Woodson, it claimed that the plans for the building included an auditorium at basement level, instead of first floor level, as set forth in the regulations on which the plans were drawn. The committee desired to have the auditorium placed at Division avenue level and a gymnasium and shops constructed under it.

The municipal architect maintained, however, that the auditorium was a first-floor level, although it is reached by descending a flight of stairs from Division avenue. The matter will be thrashed out at a meeting of the board of education tomorrow, when the municipal architect will be present. The committee, comprising also Z. F. Ramseur and Mrs. Carrie Knox, plans to appeal to the board for the larger structure.

Workman Injured in Fall.

John Donovan, 48 years old, of 222 Second street southeast, fell 10 feet to the ground and suffered possible fractures of the right ankle and heel yesterday afternoon when the scaffold on which he was working at Seventeenth street and Rhode Island avenue northeast gave way.

One Dead, Two Hurt in Row Over Heating of Pigs' Feet

An argument over cold pigs' feet last night resulted in the death of one colored man and injuries to the other two combatants in a three-hand fight in the lunchroom and store of Enoch Washington, colored, 42 years old, at 1001 Third street southeast.

The dead man, who was described to the police as John Harris, 38 years old, of 903 Third street southeast, was struck over the head with a bottle by Washington, and was pronounced dead upon the arrival of Dr. M. F. Ottman, of Casualty Hospital.

Washington suffered lacerations of the hand and wrist when a showcase in his establishment was broken during the scuffle between the three men. His assistant, Reed Johnson, 39 years old, of 907 Fourth street southeast, suffered a gunshot wound in the left arm, said to have been inflicted by Harris. Both men were treated by Dr. Ottman and then turned over to the police of the Fifth Precinct pending an inquest this morning.

According to the story told by Washington and Johnston, Harris and a colored man, believed to be Joseph L. Young, a janitor at St. Peter's Catholic Church, entered the lunchroom shortly after 8 o'clock last night and ordered pigs' feet. When they were served, the proprietor and his assistant said, the man believed to be Young ate his without complaint, but Harris demanded that his be heated.

An argument ensued and Harris left the place, returning in a few minutes with a revolver, Washington said. A scuffle followed during which Johnson was shot by Harris in the arm. Washington cut himself on broken glass and felled Harris with the bottle.

Pie Dropped From Airplane Makes Marooned Flier King

A custard pie dropped from a passing plane to Lieut. Robert H. Rhoads, Marine Corps aviator, marooned on a Haitian island, was "food from the gods" to the natives, who made him a king for the "manna."

The story reaching the Navy Department yesterday from Marine Corps headquarters in Haiti, stated Lieut. Rhoads, while on a scheduled flight from Port au Prince to Gonaives was forced to land on the island of Les Arcadines.

A half-hour later he was located by a fellow flier, to whom he signaled for repair parts, water, food and blankets. The flier dropped ham supplies and some of the food tins burst open.

He gave the broken tins and their contents to the natives, who next day demanded more "food from the gods." The heavenly bill of fare became monotonous, however, and the natives grew discontented, so Lieut. Rhoads signaled for a custard pie and the natives made him king of the island.

By that time a plane mechanic arrived by boat and Lieut Rhoads was obliged to abdicate his kingdom and fly away in his repaired ship.

Wife Sues for Divorce.

Mrs. Zelah Catherine Busey, of 1014 Florida avenue northwest, petitioned the District Supreme Court yesterday to grant her a limited divorce from her husband, Samuel Arthur Busey, fireman of the Pennsylvania Railroad, of 437 Twelfth street southeast. Through Attorneys Aubrey St. C. Wardwell and J. Edward Burroughs the wife charged her husband treated her with abuse and cruelty and deserted her on two occasions.
